The Greatest and Most Enthusiastic Gathering Ever Held in New-York.

MUSIC, CANNONS, FLAGS AND CHEERS.

The largest popular gathering ever held in this City met yesterday afternoon at and around Madison-square, in response to the call of the Loyal League of Union citizens, issued by its President, Lieut.-Gen. Winfield Scott, U. S. A.

The day was rather unpropitious. Dark rain-clouds hung over the City, and clouds of dust whistled windily through the streets; but denser than the former, and more enthusiastically restless than the latter, were the "clouds of witnesses" which by scores of thousands swarmed in front of the Fifth-avenue Hotel to shout Amen to every patriotic sentiment, and cheer with hearty voice each testimony of fealty to the land of the free and the home of the brave.

The Committee, who had charge of the meeting, deserve the thanks of the Press and the public for the ample and careful preparations made for the convenience of the one, and the entertainment of the other.

Four stands were erected, from which, as will be seen in the following report, distinguished gentlemen addressed the vast crowd, which excelled in numbers as it did in enthusiasm any ten political meetings held in this City during the past ten years. The presence of Gen. Scott, doubtless, drew many to the square who, on ordinary occasions, avoid crowds and prefer to read, rather than listen to speeches, and that their hearts were cheered by the sight of the aged soldier, and that they were amply repaid for their trouble, and duly imbued with the spirit of the occasion, was most clearly and unmistakeably evinced by the continued ebullition of enthusiastic cheerings, shoutings and hurrahings which rang forth again, and again, and again.

Stand No. 1.

The American colors, in every possible shape, floated gaily from flagstaffs, from long lines stretched across the street, and ornamented all sides of Stand No. 1, from which Dodworth's Band discoursed the national airs, and in front of which as many as could get within hearing distance were assembled. The coup d'œil was strikingly beautiful from this point, embracing as it did the entire front of the Fifth-avenue Hotel and the crowds congregated up and down Fifth-avenue, Broadway and Twenty-third-street. At precisely 4 o'clock, the Chairman and distinguished guests came forth from the hotel, and without much delay, upon motion of Mr. P. M. Wetmore, the meeting organized as follows:

Hon. Jacob A. Westervelt, Acting President.

Vice-Presidents.

Hamilton Fish,
August Belmont,
James Lenox,
Jonathan Sturges,
P. Perit,
William B. Astor,
A. A. Low,
Luther Bradish,
and others.

SPEECH OF HON. GEO. BANCROFT.

Hon. Geo. Bancroft was first introduced, and spoke as follows: Two years ago the purposes and acts of the rebellion forced the faithful citizens of the United States to rise in arms and prove that we are a people—that we possess a country. Every hour of the long and terrible conflict has raised it in importance; the eyes of the whole civilized world rest upon us; the industrial classes of Europe bend toward us in sympathy and hope as to their champions; and the question is found to be not merely whether the United States shall be stricken from the family of nations, but whether the vital principles of freedom shall be preserved. [Applause.] The imperative call of duty cheers us on to the struggle more than ever; for unless we succeed, the power of the people which pervades all history as a prophecy, is beaten down, and there is no other Western hemisphere where the struggle can be renewed. We have no choice; we must persevere. If we would build up the home of humanity—if we would safely transmit the regenerating principles that give life its value—we must persevere. The result cannot be doubtful. The resources of the rebellion are nearly exhausted, while our own prosperity has hardly been impaired; we must press onward with united zeal, and "win the victory of endurance born." [Cheers.] We meet to-day without reference to party to pledge ourselves to one another for the vigorous prosecution of the war, until right shall triumph. But while we reserve to ourselves the utmost liberty of judgment both of men and measures, it is but an act of simple justice and historic truth to say that the rebellion found not even a plausible excuse in the Administration which last came into power. No sooner had the elections passed over than those who succeeded made every effort to allay excitement. A party had been formed that seemed pledged to prohibit the introduction of Slavery into the Territories, and yet the men of that party, after deliberations not in an unauthorized and insignificant Peace Congress, so called, but in the constitutional halls of legislation, joined in organizing the territories of the United States, without the restriction in the fundamental law of any one of them, leaving the event to the action of natural causes. A motion was even made and countenanced by intimate friends of the incoming President to bring a vast territory under the name of New-Mexico into the Union as an independent State, without any such restriction, and at a time when the municipal law of that Territory sustained Slavery with an extravagant hyperbole of intolerance. Nor were the friends of the present President wanting in giving assurances that his Administration would be as little marked by hostility to Slavery as if the Chair had been occupied by Madison or Henry Clay. Moreover, the Generals of the President's appointment were loud in professing their readiness in the midst of war, to pause in their career and assist in suppressing any possible rising of slaves. But yet, under all these circumstances, so infatuated was Slavery, that it still passionately pursued its purpose, and for the sake of founding a Confederacy on a basis on which no enduring Government can rest, aimed a blow that was intended to be fatal to the country and to the liberty of man. The war was, under every aspect, forced upon the Northern States; it was a war from which they could not escape. Had they proved cravens, they would have stood before the Powers of the earth of their own day, and before all succeeding generations, as men who betrayed their country and were recreant to Freedom itself. [Applause.] Our coming together on this occasion means that no exertion shall be wanting to annihilate the rebellion by the united and untiring exertion of the wealth and strength of the nation. It means that those who are in arms against our flag shall not at the same time receive at our hands the belligerent rights of alien enemies and the constitutional rights of citizens. It means that whoever may be at the head of our armies, the undivided sympathy of the country is to command unity in council and add vigor to every blow. [Applause.] It means that with one heart we entreat the President to disregard all considerations of so-called party necessities; to adopt no measures but for the public good; to turn a deaf ear to all selfish importunities of politicians of every party, and ever to remember that it would be a sin against the country, against his own happiness now, against his name with posterity, to lift an unfit man to office, in civil life or in the field. [Applause.] It means that all the generous feeling of the country goes forth to cheer on the noble statesmen of Missouri who are now struggling to shake off the terrible evil which alone holds that State back from one of the first places—perhaps from the very first place in the Union—for agriculture, mining, mechanical industry, for wealth and population. It means that our earnest sympathies embrace the freemen of the South, who, trained in the school of poverty, are now compelled by tyrannical power to fight for results that are in direct conflict with their own chances of happiness and advancement. It means that we are eager to go to the assistance of our friends in our mountain regions, and to give them security in the natural fastnesses of American freedom. Nor are we deterred from rendering a loyal support to the Government by the thought that the war in its results will weaken Slavery, or even work its overthrow. Civil war has always, in God's providence, been a means for rescuing men from bondage. Who is there to deplore the probable result that States where, in times past, labor has been despised, should come to own the true nobility of the working man, and restore the fields and the workshops to the free? Take Virginia, for an example. Her soil is fertile, her air salubrious; her springs renovate health; her mountains glisten with precious ores. There, in her many chambers, where nature has heaped up stores of gold and silver, of gypsum and iron, of salt and copper, an evil spirit has cast over her its spell, and she sleeps in almost hopeless lethargy. Who will mourn if the time has come when her long and deep slumber shall be broken? Who will grieve if the procession of the Star Spangled Banner, borne onward to the songs of liberty, shall wake her from her trance of centuries? Then let her clothe her beautiful limbs in the robes of freedom and open her hundred halls to the hands of self-directed enterprise and skill. [Applause.] The present bitterness will pass away, and the next generation of her sons will meet ours in affection, and they will own that from this desperate strife has sprung the blessed regeneration of their lovely land. Nor is union required by our domestic affairs alone. There is reason to believe that here in New-York, men, falsely usurping the name of Democracy, have been willing to invite the interposition of the aristocracies of Europe. These men must be made to know that they stand alone. [Cheers and cries of "Good."] A nation which has always professed zeal for free trade, aims at a monopoly of the international carrying trade for themselves, by sending out ships built in their own shipyards, to prey upon our commerce. It is here in New-York more than in any place in our land, that the Government should be able to count with certainty upon a unanimous support in its efforts to maintain, against any foreign power, the rights and the dignity and interests of the country. [Applause.] So then the love of the Constitution, the love of liberty, the love of country, a proper sense of overhanging dangers, a just appreciation of our resources, conspire to demand the patriotic union of the people as our security at home and our only protection against wrongs from abroad." [Applause.]

SPEECH OF HON. HENRY J. RAYMOND.

Hon. Henry J. Raymond was next introduced, and addressed the meeting as follows:

Fellow-Citizens: It is impossible to look upon this vast mass of the intelligent citizens of New-York, assembled to renew their devotion—to renew a declaration of their allegiance to our common country—without feeling the profoundest conviction that, whatever else may fail, the courage, the loyalty and the determination of the American people to rescue their nation will not fail, now or hereafter. [Applause.] We who are here assembled can recall, without doubt, the scene presented, two years ago to-day, near this very spot. When then we assembled at the first call of our country, at the first announcement of the dangers that surrounded us. At the first trumpet peal that the American arm was needed to rescue American liberty from the peril that overhung it, we came together because the capital of our country was in danger, because that capital with the Liberty that it symbolized, all the glory that had alighted upon our flag in the years that had passed, all the hopes we cherished for our children in the years to come, seemed likely to sink forever in the ocean of Rebellion. We assembled then, and in the presence of high Heaven vowed that the nation should live, and that all that threatened its existence should perish. [Applause.] And from that day to this, we here, our brethren on the field of battle, loyal hearts from the Atlantic to the Pacific, have been making good that vow, taken here and registered in Heaven above. And now what a contrast is presented to-day, to the picture that was presented to us! Then, as I have already said, the rebel enemies of liberty threatened our Capital; they beleaguered the Senate-house, they overawed our Government, they held everything south of the Potomac, they held Missouri, they held Kentucky, they held the Great Mississippi—every Southern State was in their hands. And now see how the tide of rebellion has been rolled onward toward the Gulf. See how little remains to them of the territory they then possessed! See what occasion we have for rejoicing at the successes already achieved, and the determination of our people to stand by the flag and rescue it from all the dangers that hang around it. [Applause.] We have come here to-day to renew those vows, to protest again, in the face of high Heaven, that, come weal or come woe, whether it be one year or ten years, whether it be now or through all time to come, the liberties of the American people shall live forever. [Enthusiastic cheering.] We have have had to contend with a gigantic rebellion that assumed proportions never before seen on the face of the earth. I take it upon me to say that there is not a crowned head in Europe; there is not a Government on the face of the earth based on privilege, that could have stood against this rebellion one year of trial and struggle; and yet here the American people are not only standing against it, but are growing stronger by the contest. [Applause.] We are to-day stronger in every respect—stronger in men, stronger in money, stronger in the courage of loyal hearts, stronger in determination of purpose—than we were the day this rebellion broke out. [Applause.] We shall grow stronger until the contest is over; and the reason is this: our Government rests on the hearts and the will of the people—it protects the rights of the people—it is engaged in a contest for the liberties of the people—and, so long as human right, human liberty, all that is dear to man struggling for self-government, retain their place in the American heart, so long shall we grow stronger by the contest that we wage for their maintenance. [Applause.] We grow stronger because our cause is just, and because it is the cause of the people—because it is our cause. How is it that we thus grow stronger than those against whom we contend? While we grow stronger in the material of war, stronger in the courage of loyal hearts, every breeze that comes to us from the South tells of famine and suffering, and exhaustion and discouragement—and, behind all that, rely upon it, there are loyal hearts there, yet held down by the military power, that breathe night and day a fervent prayer for a return to the old Union which gave them all their prosperity, and in which alone can they have any hope for the future. [Cheers.] Crushed to earth as are these loyal hearts, silenced in death as these loyal voices may be, rely upon it, when we once crush the military power of the Southern Confederacy, we shall have an easy path to the affections of the Southern people. [Renewed cheering.] It is idle to talk of peace until that has been done. [A voice—"That's so."] Everybody sees now that this is so. Last Fall it was common to hear talk of reconciliation, of compromise, of measures of peace, of the olive branch going with the sword. Now, I think as much of the olive branch as any one; I pray as fervently as any man on the American soil for the return of peace, but only peace with honor, and peace with the preservation of the liberties of the American people. [Applause.] We can stand war, we can stand suffering, we can stand a contest of years. There is but one thing we cannot stand, and that is dishonor, the destruction of this great American nation, the prostration of the liberties of the American people, the blotting out of these Stars and Stripes, and the glorious hopes which they carry round the world. [Applause.] Up to this day, to what have the nations of the Old World looked for hope and deliverance from their oppressions? What flag on the face of the earth challenges their affections and enjoys their hearts' loyalty? Let the downtrodden on the furthest point of our planet be asked to what nation he looks as the model of his ideal of government, the guerdon of his hopes—where is it that he looks for peace in the future—what flag does he worship in his heart of hearts, and he tells of none but the glorious Stars and Stripes under which he hopes to find a refuge. Everywhere, by one and all, we are recognized as the only nation resting on the basis of popular rights, aiming to secure popular liberties for all the nations of the earth. This Government has been an experiment, endeavoring to decide whether a great nation can be built up powerfully enough to maintain itself against the world, and free enough to give every individual citizen the full enjoyment of his rights, and a full and perfect voice in the conduct of that Government. This rebellion strikes at the existence not only of this experiment, but of the liberty which it is intended to establish. Strike down this flag, break up this Government, prostrate this nation, and kings and aristocrats will forever after trample unfettered on the necks of all the people on the face of the earth. [Applause.] It is that that gives courage and heart and determination to the American people in this great contest; it is that, which nerves our hearts and our arms and leads us to proclaim here, everywhere, and forever, our purpose to vindicate the liberties of our Government, and to crush that rebellion which threatens their extinction. Whether it be in two or ten years from now, that liberty shall live forever, to the eternal destruction of its foes. [Applause.] I do not know, fellow-citizens, whether there are any here who feel discouraged at the slow progress, as they call it, of the war. If there are, I beg them to bear in mind, that war is not an extempore affair. A war of two great people—twenty millions against eight—is not to be settled in a hurry; it is not a thing for which preparation can be made in a hurry; it is a war requiring the combined energies and thoughts, and studies and experience, of the best men of the whole country for a long time to get ready, and for a longer time to carry into execution the plan they have formed; and like everything else human, it is subject to accidents, to contingencies, it is subject to blunders—blunders will occur in this, as in everything else. The only thing is, to keep steadily at it until it is accomplished. [Applause.] Whatever else may fail, if our courage does not fail, the end is sure. Let us, then, discountenance forever, here and elsewhere, all thoughts of discouragement, all pretence that the war is not making the progress that it ought. It is not making the progress we wish it were making—for one, I wish it could be ended to-morrow night, I wish it could be done in twenty minutes. Charles Mackay said everything was done in America in about twenty minutes. I do not expect to see it accomplished in that time. You remember he said, in this country he found it one of our peculiarities, that everything here was done in twenty minutes. If he went to have a coat made, the tailor said it should be done in about twenty minutes; if he went to hire a horse, and asked the man when he wanted it back, he was told, "in about twenty minutes;" and if he went to see a friend, and the servant told him that his friend was dead. He asked how long he had been dead, and the servant said, "About twenty minutes." [Laughter.] Now, I am afraid that all fall a little into this habit of expecting that everything will be done in about twenty minutes. Why, fellow-citizens, what great war was ever ended in one, or two, or three, or five years? Our war for independence was a mere bagatelle compared with the war which we are now compelled to wage to maintain that independence; and yet it lasted seven long years. The war which England waged with all Europe lasted from 1792 to 1815, and yet the English people did not get tired of it. How much money do you suppose they spent in it?

Well, they spent in that war, the sum of five thousand five hundred millions of dollars, and yet, when they got through with it they were better off than when they started. I mean literally what I say; their business was better, every man in the country was making more money than when that war started. The taxes were heavy, for they paid—of the eleven hundred millions of pounds which that war cost them, they paid of it six hundred and forty millions of pounds by direct taxation; the four hundred and sixty millions went into a national debt. In spite of all that, they were better able all the time to pay these enormous taxes on account of the stimulus which the war gave to their business. Now we talk here about the depression of the country by the effect of the war upon the business of the country. I would like to know whether it is not a fact within the knowledge of all of you that business here in New-York to-day is better than it was when the war began? Are not wages better in all kinds of business? There are individual failures—there have been failures, there will be such, always; but as a general thing the business of this City and of the whole loyal parts of this country is better than it was when the war began. Why? For the simple reason that we have had added to the ordinary amount of money used in our business all the amount spent in the war. Why, instead of having our ordinary avocations to give us an income, we have a million of men set to a different business, and they are paid their wages, and they send their wages to their families; and taking them away from the active pursuits of life, makes room for more, raises wages, builds everything up, and gives a new stimulus to every department of industry. Let me ask any man here if he is doing business on twenty thousand dollars a year, whether he cannot double that business by borrowing twenty thousand to do it on? He has got to pay it some time or other; but while he has the use of it his business is more prosperous than it was before, and he is better able to pay the taxes which the war causes than if there was no war at all, and that proved to be the fact with the English; people one-third of all the tax levied upon them by that war was paid directly by the stimulus afforded by the business of the country, by the progress of the war itself. Instead, then, of exhausting the country, this war gives additional stimulus to the business of the country, and although when the war is over we shall have the debt to provide for, we shall find the energy of the people equal to it, for I am sure there is no man here or anywhere else on the continent, who will concede for one moment that we cannot do whatever the people of Great Britain could ever do. [Applause.] And if they could go through a war of twenty years without any perceptible object except to prevent the people of France from having such a Government as they wanted, I am sure that we can go through a war of ten years to guarantee to ourselves and our posterity the right of having a Government of our own choice. [Applause.] Fellow-citizens, I feel that this is no time to argue a question of this sort. I feel very much in the condition of the Scotch preacher, who preached two hours to a congregation against the awful sin of luxury, when there were not three persons in the house who had shoes on their feet. [Laughter.] I do not mean to draw a parallel between his congregation and mine in that respect, but I do not suppose there is a man here who needs to be reasoned with on this point any more than these barefoot Scotchmen did on the evil of luxury. All that we have to do, fellow-citizens, is, to unite and stay united in this war against rebellion. There never was on the face of the earth a cause which challenged the heart's devotion of the whole people like that for which we are now contending. It is the cause of popular rights; it is the cause of ourselves and our children; it is to perpetuate the American nationality, the liberties of the American people, the rights of the American people to choose their own Government and to make their own laws, and have here on this Western Continent a great, powerful empire that protects the liberties of its people, that seeks no war with any other nation, but that fears no war with all the nations on the face of the earth. [Applause.] And now I am free to admit that if there were any case of intolerable oppression there would be some justification for rebellion and war. We have heard the doctrine broached that if the people of the South want a nation of their own, they have a right to it. The simple answer is this: they had a Government of their own before they attempted to break it up. This Government of the American people was their Government as much as it was ours, and probably it has been a good deal more so. [Applause.] They have had it always their own way, and the moment they began to suspect they could no longer tyrannize over us, then they began to complain of our tyranny, and attempted to destroy the nation in which they lived. But there can be no such thing, fellow-citizens, as justifiable revolution against a Government of the people. What is it? Is it a rebellion of a majority of the people? Did a majority of the people of this country consent to overthrow this Government? [A Voice—No.] No one pretends that; even if every man, woman and child in the South wished it, they would be but a very small minority. Now is a minority to overthrow a free government, whenever they see fit, to plead tyranny as an excuse therefor? [A Voice—No.] If there is any foundation for such a pretence as that, then there is an end to all Government, and the South may not only rebel to-day, and New-York to-morrow, and Connecticut the next day, and the County of Westchester the day after. [Laughter.] It destroys all possibility of Government; people go back to their original elements. Instead of being a people bound together by the links of nationality, constituting a great and powerful empire, holding aloft the starry flag of hope to the nations of the earth, going on in a career of prosperity, of order and of law, we become a mere mob of unorganized individuals, which there is no rightful power to organize, and which can never have any existence, unless it be imposed upon them by the sword and the bayonet. We have not come to any such necessity as that yet. We stand here, to-day, to proclaim that whatever may betide us, whether weal or wo, we stand to fight for the American nationality, for popular rights, and fight for the flag that symbolizes them all; that goes to the ends of the earth as an emblem of power, a prophecy of our greatness; and we will defend it, not only against Southern rebels, but against all aiders and abettors on the face of the earth. [Applause.] And now, fellow-citizens, I thank you for the patience with which you have heard me. [Voices—"Go on."] It is a good deal easier said than done. I desire merely furthermore, to congratulate you upon the restoration, if it has been interrupted at all, of the Union, harmony, and thorough determination of the loyal North to crush this rebellion, whatever it may cost. [Applause.] For one, I never perceived any great divisions of the American people on the main point. I see differences on minor points; I see men who differ from me every day on this measure of policy, on the wisdom of the men, on the propriety and expediency of this step or the other step; but I have very seldom found a man who would say to me that he was in favor of dividing this Union and giving the rebels a triumph. That is the main point; we can afford to differ on others. Every man—you, and I, and everybody else—has a right to differ from the President, or from Congress, or from the Cabinet, or from all together, on any mere point of policy; that is a matter of opinion. We have a right to our own opinions, whether we are Democrats, or Republicans, or Abolitionists, or Americans, or anything else. We have a right to our own opinions just as much now as we ever had; but we have not a right to do this, to stand in the way of the Government in its attempt to preserve the life of the nation. [Applause.] No man has a right to do that; and whenever the Government adopts a policy and enters upon its execution, while it is the policy of the country, while it is a law standing upon the statute books, it is every man's duty to give it a loyal, fair, frank, straightforward support. He has a right to change it if he can; he has a right to put men in office who will change it, and if he is in Congress, he has a right to vote for changing it; but while it is the law, he should stand by it. Stand by the laws; stand by the constituted authorities of the country; stand by the flag and all who defend it; stand by your soldiers, who are periling their lives on the field, who are shedding their blood for our liberties and the liberties of our children; honor them in your thoughts; follow them in your prayers; remember them day and night, for they are entitled to your hearts' warmest and best love. [Applause.] They have shed their blood on many a stricken field, from the brave old General who presides over you to-day,—[three cheers for Gen. Scott],—for him who stands, to-day, as he has always stood, the embodiment of American liberty, devoted to the dearest liberties of his country, ready at any moment to peril comfort and life itself, to the humblest soldier who to-day is preparing to march, under Hooker, to meet the foe again upon the Rappahannock. [Three cheers for Gen. Hooker.] They are all entitled to your love. While, then, fellow-citizens, this contest with the rebellion lasts, let us hear nothing of divisions upon the main point. Have as many others as you like; have any division on the face of the earth among yourselves that will not interrupt the career of our armies to victory, and the career of free government to prosperity and to glory. Differ on minor matters, be a Democrat, anything you like; for my own part, I don't believe there is any party in this country; I do not believe there is any knot of men sufficiently large and sufficiently respectable to be under the name of a party that is not loyal to the Constitution and the Union. [Applause.] The Democratic party I have not agreed with in its measures; I have thought many of them detrimental to the various interests of the country and the American States. [Applause.] But, rely upon it, they had a path of duty marked out for themselves. They stood ready to save the nation if they could; perhaps they were in hopes they would have a chance by-and-by. And if this Administration cannot save the Union, then I pray God in Heaven to send another that can, whether it be Democratic or any other. [Applause.] We are to have the Union preserved; we are to have the American nation still existing, first and foremost among the nations of the earth, none of its stars blotted out, none of its glories dimmed; its flag untainted, it shall still pursue its path of honor, of glory and of freedom, through ages yet unborn. [Enthusiastic applause.]

The Glee Club now favored the audience with a patriotic song, which elicited general approval. Just as they concluded, the grand turnout of the Express Companies came in front of the stand. It created some confusion, but was, however, warmly welcomed and honored with three cheers. Hon. John Van Buren was then called for, and spoke as follows:

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN VAN BUREN.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I heartily congratulate you upon this magnificent uprising of the people of the City of New-York and the surrounding neighborhood. It shows that there has been no abatement in that spirit of patriotism that distinguished the people of this country some two years since, on the first outbreak of the rebellion, which has had no parallel in the civilized world. It is the first attempt on the part of men to upset a Government, when no man being engaged in that attempt was able, when it commenced, or has been at any time since, to name one single particular in which either his liberty, his property, or his life had been put in jeopardy. [Applause.] No human being, whether he favored the rebellion or whether he opposed it, has been able to understand how in any single regard those who attempted madly to overthrow the Government of this country had been in the slightest degree injured. I defy the talent and ingenuity of the most acute rebel in the Southern country, or any sympathizer with him, to tell me how he has been injured by the Government of this country up to this day. [Applause.] It was an utterly unjustifiable attempt to overthrow the existing Government. I have often conceded that there were circumstances of irritation—circumstances of provocation—but these constitute an excuse, not a justification. This rebellion is wholly without justification, in my judgment. This being the fact, it was natural for the people of this country to rise unanimously, as they did two years since, to put down the rebellion so unjustifiable, and in proof of that we assembled here, as other citizens in other portions of the United States have assembled, to declare to the constituted Government, whether it was an Administration of their own choice, or of their profession, that the time had come when party considerations must cease to operate, and when the people of this country with entire unanimity must uphold the Government of this country irrespective of all party considerations. [Applause.] I have entertained that opinion always, and although I did not address the meeting held two years since, I derived great gratification from the proceedings, and there never has been a moment from that time to this when I have seen anything to induce me to relax my efforts in upholding the Government and in putting down this rebellion. [Applause.] Such being the fact, it was with no little pain that I observed that many of those associated with me in political fellowship, thought that circumstances had occurred to authorize them to withhold their support from the constituted authority of this country, and that the time had arrived when they were to declare that this war must cease—that its objects had been perverted—that the means used to carry on the war were unjustifiable, and that it was the duty of those with whom I politically acted, to work for the conquering, not of war, but of peace. [Laughter.] I declined to participate in any such proceeding—[laughter and applause]—and on several occasions have taken the liberty to state what seemed to me to be the duty of every good citizen. I had occasion to address a Democratic Union Association within a few yards of here, on the corner of Twenty-third-street and Broadway. I addressed an assemblage on the 22d of February, on the occasion of a banquet given by the Corporation of this City, and I addressed an assemblage of my fellow-citizens at Cooper Institute, and on the 6th of last month in Brooklyn—always in this immediate neighborhood, and always explained precisely the mode by which I happened to be present, who invited me, why I came, and what I proposed to say and to do. On the 6th inst., when we assembled at Cooper Institute, resolutions were introduced and passed, declaring that the Union must be preserved and the Constitution upheld; that the Government must be sustained; that treason must be rebuked; that the constituted authorities must be upheld in all their constitutional efforts to suppress the rebellion. I believe nobody took exception to any of those declarations. But the meeting chose to go further, and they resolved to form themselves into a loyal league, whose duty it should be to uphold these views, and disseminate them as far as they were able, and to contribute all the power they might have, in time, in means, in influence, to propagate these sentiments. Of that League Gen. Scott was elected President. [Applause.] Various gentlemen were elected Vice-Presidents, and among others Mr. James T. Brady. I mention these particulars, because the League itself has been the object of considerable unfriendly comment from my political associates, and it is to them that I have been in the habit mainly of speaking, and with them that I generally desire to reason. Now it would not be difficult, did time allow, to show that in the officers of that League were those who had contributed very largely to the ascendancy of the Democratic party at the last gubernatorial election. I might bring the standing of our presiding officers, or the arduous exertions of one of my associates, Mr. Brady, and show other members of the Loyal League at least entitled to friendly criticisms from their political associates; but, it seems, they were not so fortunate as to obtain it. A newspaper, printed in this State, edited by a very worthy gentleman, who was born and reared at Rome, and found his way to Albany, and has now charge of the present organ of the Democratic party, has taken occasion to denounce the League and all that coöperated with it. I will call your attention to the language of it for a few moments. It is as follows:

From the New-York Atlas and Argus, Tuesday Morning, March 17, 1863.

"* * * Just then Onondaga County uttered its expression, which will be apt to be regarded as a clearer indication of the popular understanding than any of the ephemeral demonstrations of sensationists in the commercial metropolis.

Leagues and Unions are very much like the junior branch of the Bricklayers' Protective Society, of which Mr. Dickens writes. They answer for speeches and platforms, and badges, and Presidents and Secretaries, but they seem never to demonstrate any affinity with the ballot box."

Now we did not propose on that occasion to operate at the ballot-box; but, if we are invited to do so, it is well worthy of consideration whether it don't become our duty. [Applause.]

From the Atlas and Argus, Friday morning, March 27, 1863.

"* * * When we recognize in the company that crowds into them (the Leagues) all the radical Abolitionists who have for years railed at the Union and denounced the Constitution, and all the corrupt contractors who are picking the feathers from the dying eagle, we may safely conclude that they are not a fitting resort for reputable men."

From the same, Monday morning, March 30, 1863.

After repeating some remarks of a Kentuckian, the Atlas and Argus adds: "And it is with such men—false to their God, false to the Constitution, false to manhood—that Democrats are asked to fraternize in 'Loyal Leagues!'"

Now, I must ask my old political associates, what have Democrats to do at this crisis who believe that the condition of the country requires the war to be prosecuted and the rebellion to be put down? We are told we shall join the Democratic party. Well, to me that is impracticable, because I always belonged to it. [Laughter.] Mr. Brady and Judge Daly could be hardly asked to put down the rebellion in that way. [Laughter.] Then we are told in New-York that we must join in political association and union with the Democratic party. What is that? Mozart is the only organization that has spoken upon the subject of the war, and, in order to join what is regarded by this Press as a fit association for reputable men, I am asked to quit a League of which Gen. Winfield Scott is President, and join a society of which Fernando Wood is Chairman. [Laughter, and a voice—"Hit him again."] Now that Association has recently declared its views upon the subject of the war, and I wish to call your attention for a moment to the sentiments they have declared upon that subject. They met, on April 7, at Cooper Institute, and they resolved that they, "under these circumstances," have declared for what they thought the Constitution of the country—under these circumstances they declared for peace. [Laughter.] "This Administration," they said, "could not conquer the South if they would, and would not if they could." [Laughter.] What, then, is the loyal Association that we are invited to join in order to prosecute the war? [Applause.] But, in regard to loyalty, they resolved "that we denounce the Loyal League movement as a base invention of the enemy." [Laughter.] A league presided over by Winfield Scott, a base invention of the enemy. [Laughter.] They also resolved, that the terms "loyal" and "disloyal" are not American, and not appropriate to our institutions, and had been discontinued in this country since the proclamations of Burgoyne, Cornwallis and Howe, until revived by Abraham Lincoln. [Laughter.] Now, I was present at the Democratic State Convention which nominated Horatio Seymour, which passed only four resolutions. The first declared for a vigorous prosecution of the war. The second declared that the purposes of the war were stated in the Crittenden resolutions, which were passed almost unanimously by both Houses of Congress, and still stand. They declared, and the Mozart orator was a member of that Convention, and made a speech in favor of the platform; and the third resolution was in these words: "We, having confidence in the loyalty [laughter] of the citizens of New-York, reiterate the sentiments heretofore expressed by the Democratic party;" and the fourth resolution was, "that we are willing to act in the coming election with any class of loyal citizens [laughter] who agree with us in the principles here expressed." [Laughter.] Thus you will perceive that the first loyal league was the Democratic State Convention which assembled last Autumn; [applause;] and one of the coöperators in it was Mr. Fernando Wood himself, the Chairman of the Mozart Committee, [laughter and applause,] who has the audacity to tell us that the word "loyal" has been discontinued since the days of Burgoyne, Cornwallis and Howe. [Laughter.] Fellow-citizens, allow me to say a few words to you about the mode of putting down this rebellion. I do not believe that simply belonging to the Democratic party will end the war that has been going on these two years. Since I belonged to the party Jeff. Davis claimed to be a member, so does Mason and Slidell. I do not see that that ends the war. [Applause.] What would be thought of the passengers of a ship, who in a dreadful gale found that the vessel had sprung aleak, and who should say to others, "find out where the leak is; stop it at all hazards; if our masts are all carried away rig a jury-mast; if you can't save the ship save the passengers; construct a raft; be sure and save our lives, and as for the rest we will sit here and grumble; we belong to the Democratic party." [Laughter.] If that ship had to be lightened to be saved it is easy to see what part of the cargo ought to be thrown overboard. [Applause and laughter.] Now, we are told that the Democrats who are in these leagues are dupes. [Laughter.] Mr. Forney has said that this is a devise for President making, and that the Presidential canvass has commenced, and we must be careful. Well, it would not be at all remarkable if I should be duped. I pretend to no peculiar acuteness, nor is it at all material what I may happen to do. But, here's my friend, Mr. Brady, at the summit of his profession, and distinguished in a branch of it that peculiarly requires in it a knowledge of the motives of men, or the ways of the world. I doubt whether he can be very much imposed upon; [laughter;] and how exceedingly kind it is in this Albany editor to caution Gen. Scott that he shall not be duped. [Cheers for Gen. Scott.] If, when he had been engaged in the Western war, this editor had told him "look out for Black Hawk," or, when in the Northeast crisis, to look out for Sir John Harvey, or when engaged in the delicate task of treating with these same men in the days of Nullification, to look out for John C. Calhoun; or, in the Mexican War, to caution him against Santa Anna, what a mercy it would have been to have had such advice! [Laughter.] I think the General will be able to protect himself against imposition in the present condition of the country, in the League of which he is the honored President. [Applause.] Again we are told that this is no time to be talking about war; that we must be talking about arrests; that our fellow-citizens have been arrested—illegally arrested. Last year, when Forts Lafayette and Warren were filled, when a large majority were in favor of those who were making arrests; when the Governors of this State, New-Jersey, and of Pennsylvania were Republicans, then it seemed to me a proper time to talk about arrests. I think it would have been well for Vallandigham, when his neighbor, Dr. Olds, was put in prison, to speak against these arrests; but he kept quiet. I think it would not have been amiss if the chieftain of Mozart could have said something of arrests when the Daily News was suppressed, and his brother Ben fled to Canada to avoid arrest. [Laughter.] That would have been a good time to speak. But now, when that party is overthrown—now, when another party is at the head of affairs, when the prisons are thrown open wide, when Forts Lafayette and Warren are emptied, and no inquiry made why the inmates were imprisoned, or why discharged; when no human being has the slightest apprehension of illegal arrests, it is no time to make charges against the Administration, in the shape of an indictment for their misdeeds, instead of struggling to aid them in putting down the rebellion. It seems to me that this indictment, to use the language of the Court in another indictment against the Chief Magistrate, "comes at least a day too late." [Laughter, and a voice, "Fernando."] There is nothing, in my humble judgment, nothing to prevent the vigorous support of the war by all the citizens of the United States, without distinction of party. Nor is there any cause for any Democrat to experience any apprehension that in joining a Loyal League he becomes a second Burgoyne, or Cornwallis, or any other disreputable person. [Applause.] I have thus called your attention to some of the objections to the course which I have chosen to take. There was a very extensive political discussion in Connecticut, not very long ago, during the pendency of the election. Mr. Isaac Toucey, who had been a member of the administration of Buchanan, undertook to enlighten his political friends in regard to the questions involved in that canvass, and he told them that the difficulty was that they had departed from the policy of Mr. Buchanan. [Laughter.] He said—he having been a member of that Administration—that if they had adhered to the policy of Mr. Buchanan, that there never would have been any need of this war. [Laughter.] Well, Mr. Buchanan's administration included Messrs. Dix, Holt, Stanton and Toucey, and it is more than likely that the three first gentlemen, in sustaining the Government, did right, than that Mr. Toucey did right in abandoning it and pointing out what ought to have been done two years ago and finding fault with every thing that has been done since. I do not wish to enter into any controversy with Mr. Toucey; but it is certainly proper, after the Connecticut election, that I should say a few words in regard to his views. The question is not what we should have done two years ago, but, what are we to do now? Mr. Toucey has been withdrawn from public life for a considerable time, and when this Connecticut sun went down behind the Hartford hills, and absolutely refused to shine for two years, what were we to do who were left out in the darkness? Were we to blame, having no light except that which broke from the rebels' cannon firing on Fort Sumter, that we fired back at those who fired at us? What are we to do now, between this and the next Presidential election? Suppose I should concede that Mr. Toucey ought to be the next President, in March, 1865, what are we to do in the meantime? What are we to do who have Abraham to our father, while we wait for the second coming of Isaac? [Great laughter.] It does not answer to tell us what we ought to have done so long ago, or what is going to happen so long in the future. The interesting inquiry to this generation, in the present crisis, is what they are to do now. And now there is but one thing to do—that is to fight. Did anybody ever hear that when people make war upon you, you are to supplicate for peace? Why, if we are conquered, of course we must sue for peace; but if we are not conquered, then all we have to do is to fight. Suppose a man came up to you and took you by the throat, would you call upon your friends to see upon what terms he would settle? [Laughter.] I know of no way except to defend yourself, and defend yourself by assailing him, and assailing him in his most vulnerable part, [applause;] keeping always in mind the practice of the early Christians, and keeping as near the rules of civilized warfare as the circumstances will permit. [Laughter and applause.] Now, fellow-citizens, let us look for a few moments—and I will detain you but a very few minutes—at the conditions of this war. Let us see whether there is anything to discourage us in what has occurred. I say there is everything to encourage the people of the loyal States, taking a proper and rational view of the circumstances of the country. We were a people of peace two years ago; we knew nothing of war waged upon a great scale, in which the whole nation should be involved. We have recovered a very large portion of the territory of the United States—we have recovered a large portion of Tennessee, nearly the whole of Kentucky, a large portion of Louisiana, nearly the whole of Virginia, and very large districts of the country; we have preserved a blockade for two years; and I have entire confidence that if there was not a blow struck for twelve months, if this blockade could be strictly preserved for the twelve months, the rebellion would be subdued. [A voice—"I believe that."] I don't desire to wring a victory from the pinched bellies of that people, in preference to extracting it from their battered heads; but there is no doubt that if this blockade is vigorously preserved, as now, and it is certain that it can be, for the next twelve months, the war will be ended. We must have no trouble with any foreign Power; we must make this our sole controversy until it is ended; we must keep friends with Great Britain, with France and with Russia, so that there will be no interference from abroad. I have no doubt we can do so. It was predicted that the grass would grow in the streets of New-York when the Southern trade ceased. [Laughter.] We were assured that all that kept us alive was the Southern trade. I don't think the grass in our streets would pay any rebel for mowing. [Laughter.] I think no man could go to our shops, to our parks, to our public places of amusement, to our places of worship, or to the festivals in the City, and suppose for a moment that we were engaged in a war. And do you suppose that a people prosperous as the gentleman who spoke before me has described—powerful as we are, as comfortable and happy can be overthrown in war ["never"] when we are to meet those who are suffering as the Southern people are? [Applause.] Why, a little while ago, I read in a Richmond paper some very contumelious suggestions in anticipation of the arrival of Commissioners from Illinois to treat for peace. [Laughter.] They said they would treat them civilly, holding their noses a little. [Laughter.] Now if the accounts that I get of the disease, and the desolation and the filth of Richmond are at all to be relied upon, they have better reason for holding their noses, than their sitting up for company from the Northwest. [Laughter.] There will be men there before a great while that will save them this trouble, and hold their noses a good deal, and their throats too. [Laughter and applause.] It is impossible that this controversy can have but one result; it is impossible that it can be protracted any great length of time, if we are a united people; ["that's it."] and to be a united people we must discard political considerations. ["That's it" and applause.] Why, have not we as much patriotism as the Southern people, and did you ever hear of a contested election there during this rebellion? ["No."] Who ran against Jefferson Davis? What one vote was cast against him when he was elected President some year ago, notwithstanding that party divisions are just as acrimonious there, and more so than they are at the North—and cannot we be equally devoted? My friends, we must be; it is indispensable; ["we will be,"] and to do that we must treat each other with forbearance. If a man is loyal, whether he is an officer of the army, with whose success you have not been satisfied, or a statesman with whom you may have differed politically, if you believe his heart is right, you must not only refuse to assail him yourself, but discountenance forever, assaults upon him by anybody else. Now what will be the end of this war in regard to one of the institutions which has been a subject of much discussion? I allude to Slavery. There have been great and delicate controversies upon this subject heretofore. We have come now to a time when by the progress of our arms, Slavery is overthrown. [Applause and "good, good."] By well-recognized principles of law it is as clear as the sun at noon, that if this war goes on twelve months there will not be a slave legally held in any one of the States and Territories, except by the President's proclamation. [Applause.] That is the necessary effect of the conquest of those States, and brought upon themselves by the war that they commenced. ["That's so."] And if this wonderful result should be achieved, if the time should come when this great calamity to the United States, and affront to the civilization of the age is wiped out in this way; if these poor Abolitionists, who never constituted a hundredth part of our population, whose pale faces and unsteady eye, produces almost the feeling of compassion that is engendered in a sound mind by meeting one who is wandering in his intellect—if they come to me and say, "Now this institution is abolished, I want you to unite with me in erecting a monument to William L. Yancey, and John Slidell, and James M. Mason, and Jefferson Davis, who abolished Slavery," I shant refuse—[laughter and applause]—I mean involuntary slavery. If our Southern friends are right in supposing that the slaves will stay with them from attachment, after they are free, of course they won't be prevented from doing so. [Laughter.] And now, one word before we go about politics, because my Democratic friends never would forgive me if I did not say something in regard to political affairs. [Laughter.] I don't believe it is a criminal offence to be thinking about who shall be the next President of the United States. I have taken occasion heretofore to say whom I should vote for, and therefore of course I don't think there is any harm in it. I believe the next President will be a Democrat. I think so because the great mass of the people are rather that way; [laughter,] and the Democrats are rather more familiar with the Administration of the Government, and a little more clever, in my judgment, in the exercise of power than their opponents. They are more experienced. For example, last year in this State, both your candidates for Governor, and both your candidates for Lieutenant-Governor were Democrats, and the only strife seemed to be, in the course of the canvass, so far as I heard, which was the best Democrat of the two. [Laughter.] But I doubt if the next President will be a candidate of the Democratic party. That organization has great difficulties to encounter. It was traditional with it to affiliate with the South, and it was right to do so when those questions which the South were interested in tended to promote the advantage of the whole country, like the tariff or internal improvements, or the bank; and an absence of discussion upon the subject of Slavery was a ground upon which the Democratic party could stand. But this question of Slavery, when Southern men pressed it in such a shape as to compel you to agitate the extension of it, was necessarily one that broke up the party. Besides, I don't believe that any party organization will succeed at the next Presidential election; [hear, hear;] and I will tell you why. Both the great political parties of the country had distinguished members at the South; when you transferred the Government to them you had the experience of all the United States and its ability and patriotism to select from in your Cabinet and in your administration of the Government. This you cannot have now. It will take the whole power of the intellect and patriotism of the loyal States to administer this Government for the four years from the 4th March, 1865. I have no manner of doubt that the next President will necessarily be one who has a right to select the best men from both of the political parties to aid in carrying the Administration of the Government, and has the ability to fall back upon the unanimous feeling of all the people of the loyal States without distinction of party in his efforts to complete the subjugation of the rebel Government and to pacify the Southern people. And now, having said to you a great deal more than I intended to, allow me to conclude by saying that I see nothing in the world to discourage any patriot, any friend of his country, any truly loyal man in the effort now making to uphold the authority of the Government, and to reëstablish the Union and Constitution throughout the entire limits of the Confederacy. I believe I know something of the people of this country; I think I ought to. I have been about with them for a large portion of my life, and I know that in every great crisis in the history of the country, the truly loyal men throughout the United States are disposed to uphold the Government, and advance its honor. You don't hear a word of the true sentiment of the South so long as Jeff. Davis' Government exists; he stands over them with an iron heel and an arbitrary sway, and while I entertain no doubt that the masses of the people there, when his armed forces are overthrown will unite with us in restoring the Union, we are obliged to act now upon the theory that they are united, and that the whole power of this Government will be necessary to overthrow the whole force of the rebel States. But you will find very shortly—I have seen indications quite recently, of a disposition to overturn his power and to displace it by putting in control over him more moderate counsel. I don't believe—I never can be made to believe that this Government is to perish. What strikes me as the wicked feature in this rebellion, is that I know that if we had gone until to-day, such is the intelligence of our people, such their power, such their resources, that we should have been at this moment the first Power on the civilized globe; and I look forward to the time, not far distant,

MONDAY, April 20—P. M.

The Weekly Averages of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, April 18, 1863, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of April 11:

Decrease in Loans	$1,212,461
Increase in Specie	1,355,551
Decrease in Circulation	138,533
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	4,214,470

Including the Clearing-house operations of the week, which show the inter-exchanges between the Banks, and including also the Sub-Treasury balance at the close of the week, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit, and also with the movement this time last season:

	April 19, 1862.	April 18, 1863.	April 11, 1863.
Capital	$69,051,000	$69,128,000	$69,128,000
Loans	123,070,263	169,632,822	170,845,283
Specie	34,671,508	36,761,696	35,406,145
Circulation	8,064,663	8,039,558	8,178,091
Gross Deposits	114,100,902	207,345,361	203,972,744
Exchanged	18,921,562	43,236,160	44,078,013
Undrawn	95,179,340	164,109,201	159,894,731
In Sub-Treasury	7,523,847	7,988,362	11,172,697

The largely-increased line of Deposits on the present Bank return reflects the unusual ease of supply in the Money market, with no corresponding demand to keep up the Loans and Discounts. There is a further accumulation of Gold in Banks, raising the increase for the fortnight to two and a half millions. The price of Money to the Brokers to-day is 4@5 ⅌ cent. on first-class collateral, and 5@6 ⅌ cent. on Railway Shares. The price of Gold ranged through the forenoon and up to about 3 o'clock at 150½@150 ⅌ cent., when there was a further sudden decline to 149@148½ ⅌ cent. The Foreign Exchanges for Wednesday's steamer are, of course, unsettled, and we hear of very few actual transactions thus far. While Gold stood at 150½, London was quoted 164@165 ⅌ cent.

The Stock Market was firm for Treasury paper and two or three of the speculative Railways, but on the general list the feeling was less strong than on Saturday, and the prevailing disposition at the regular Board appeared to be to sell Eries, New-York Central, Michigan Southerns, &c. The absorbing Bull interest of the Street again turns upon Harlem, which went up 4 ⅌ cent. on Saturday's advance, and 10 ⅌ cent. on the early price of Friday. There is [illegible] excitement on the Stock whenever it is called up at either Board, and over one-half of the commission brokers and jobbers crowd to the centre of the Exchange Room, either as buyers or sellers. The only rational explanation of this long-sustained movement and its violent fluctuations is, that a long purse or two is supposed to be at the back of the Bull interest, and (very naturally) that no anxiety is manifested to close up the account so long as 10 or 15 ⅌ cent. difference can be made on each turn of the market from week to week. What the newly-discovered value in the Stock itself may be, remains to be told.

At 4 o'clock the general market was dull, while the immediate or special favorites of speculation, such as Harlem and Hudson, were in demand at firm prices, after a very large business in them through the day. The latest sales of Gold Coin were at 148½@148⅜ ⅌ cent. The following prices were made as compared with Saturday night:

	Sat.	Mon.		Sat.	Mon.

* Later Street sales at 147¾ ⅌ cent.

The Treasury received to-day from the public $1,800,000, of which, $900,000 on the New Loan of 1882; $700,000 on Deposit at 5 per cent., and $200,000 for Customs. The Secretary is now on a business visit to Philadelphia, and the understanding is that he will extend his trip to this City in the course of a day or two.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news from Eastern Virginia is important. A dispatch from Fortress Monroe, dated yesterday, states that heavy firing had been going on for twenty-four hours on the Nansemond River, occasioned by our gunboats shelling the rebels who were attempting to plant batteries at various points to command the river. On Saturday night a gallant affair occurred. The Eighty-ninth New-York and the Eighth Connecticut regiments, aided by the gunboats, captured a rebel battery of six pieces, together with two hundred and fifty prisoners, belonging to the Forty-fourth Alabama regiment. Gen. DIX and Staff are now at Suffolk, having left Fortress Monroe on Saturday morning.

The advent of Spring weather brings us the news of activity on the part of the rebels in Arkansas. Dispatches have reached St. Louis from Fayetteville, to the effect that three thousand of the enemy—probably a combination of guerrillas—with four pieces of artillery, made an attack on that place on Saturday evening last, and were repulsed with considerable loss. Our force numbered less than two thousand men, part of whom were unarmed. We had five killed and seventeen wounded.

An important order relating to reenlistments has been issued by Gen. HOOKER, and will be found in the TIMES this morning.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the Conference Committee on the Harbor Defence bill made a report agreeing to the appropriation of a million dollars for the New-York harbor and frontier defences, to be under the direction of the Governor, the Comptroller, and United States Senator MORGAN. The Conference Committee on the Canal bill also made a report, which is against the proposition to enlarge the locks west of Montezuma this year. The bill making an appropriation for the purchase of arms was ordered to a third reading. Resolutions directing a survey of the canal locks, with a view to their enlargement, were adopted. A number of bills were passed, among them the Annual Supply bill as agreed upon by the Committee of Conference.

In the Assembly, the bill authorizing the formation of Banking Associations under the Congressional Banking act, was recommitted. The bill appropriating the surplus of the canal revenues, was ordered to a third reading. The bill providing for recording internal revenue stamps, was passed; also the bill relative to moneys and property in the custody of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals. A favorable report was made on the bill to amend the Militia law of last year. During the evening session, the reports of the Callicot Investigating Committee were considered as the special order.

GENERAL NEWS.

The body of Lieut.-Col. KIMBALL reached this City last night. A company of the Seventy-first regiment conveyed the remains to the City Hall, where they will be kept until Wednesday afternoon.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The Mayor's Message protesting against the passage of the Broadway Railroad bill, already adopted in the State Senate, and reported favorably in the Assembly, was received, read and referred to the Railroad Committee. The Message was sent to the Aldermen a fortnight ago, but as they then failed of a quorum, it was not presented. It was published soon after, however, and as the Board have not met since, and are not likely to meet this week, the courtesy of presenting the paper to the senior Board, it seems, the Mayor waived at last, probably concluding that if it could prompt any official action by the Common Council in opposition to the adoption of the bill, no more time should be lost in getting it before them. No other business of interest came up, and the Board adjourned till 1½ o'clock this afternoon, to take some action in respect to the death and funeral of Lieut.-Col. KIMBALL.

The trial of IGNATZ RADSKKY for the murder of SIGISMUND FELLNER, the diamond merchant, in October, 1861, which caused great excitement at the time, was commenced in Brooklyn yesterday. The Court-room was crowded. Mr. EDWIN JAMES appeared for the prisoner, and a jury was impaneled without much difficulty. Several witnesses were examined relative to the finding of the body, its condition when found, and the inquest by the Coroner. All the facts elicited were published at the time. The case will be continued to-day.

The inquest on the body of Mrs. THOMAS, of Weehawken Heights, whose sudden death led to suspicion against her husband, was continued yesterday before Coroner FARRELL, of Jersey City, it having been adjourned for two weeks, for the purpose of having a portion of the intestines analyzed. Nothing further has transpired in reference to the missing stomach. Mr. THOMAS was not present. He is under $10,000 bonds to appear and answer to any charge that may be brought against him in the matter. Some additional evidence was taken, when it having been announced that the chemist had not completed the analyzation of the intestines, the case was further postponed until Monday next.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, before Recorder HOFFMAN, JAMES CONNER pleaded guilty to picking the pocket of BENJ. M. RILEY of $259, and was sentenced to the State Prison for two years. MICHAEL FAGAN and JAMES SCULLY pleaded guilty to an assault with intent to commit a rape, and were remanded for sentence.

The price of Gold Coin fell off 2½ ⅌ cent. yesterday, closing 148⅜@½ ⅌ cent. The Stock Market was generally dull, Harlem and Hudson being the exceptions. There was much excitement in Harlem. Money easy. The stock of Gold in Bank, on special and general deposit, has increased two and a half millions within the fortnight; $1,355,000 last week.

Breadstuffs and Provisions were freely offered yesterday at generally easier prices, yet business was restricted. Groceries and Whisky were in less request—the latter at reduced rates, Hay and Petroleum were in fair demand. Cotton, Hemp, Oils, Spices, Tobacco and Metals were lightly dealt in and were somewhat nominal in value. Heavier freight engagements were effected. Wool ruled quiet, pending the auction sales announced for this week.

About 3,400 cattle were on sale at the Forty-fourth-street yards yesterday. Trade was animated, and prices ¼c. higher than one week ago, sales averaging from 10c.@12c. ⅌ lb. net weight for most of the stock. The advance was more on good than on poor cattle. There were not over 200 head unsold last night, and very few if any more are looked for. The market will average close upon 11c. ⅌ lb. for all the stock sold, which is the highest price since 1857.

The Great Meeting Yesterday.

If immense numbers, irrepressible enthusiasm and eloquent oratory ever gave impressiveness and complete success to any public demonstration, it was realized at Madison-square yesterday. As an expression of patriotic spirit and purpose, it was all that the most sanguine could hope or the most distrustful desire. We were about to term the demonstration a new uprising, but that would hardly be right; for, since the first, there has been no actual sinking. This is, rather, a new emerging from the clouds, and the loyalty of the people again beams out as resplendent as ever. It is a glorious inauguration of the third year of the war. It demonstrates what no man of clear insight ever doubted—that the heart of the people, however overshadowed by disappointments, and disturbed by the arts of faction, still remains essentially staunch and true. Even those who have had the most misgiving ought now to take fresh assurance that the cause of the Republic is safe beyond all contingency; for it is certain that, under a gracious Providence, so long as the spirit of the mighty North thus continues unextinguished, the old flag is sure of final triumph.

When that triumph shall come it would be presumptuous to predict. All wars have their strange vicissitudes. Yet that is but a minor matter. The great thing is that it is proved we have a public spirit that can defy every vicissitude. EDMUND BURKE said, in his dying chamber, in reference to the great struggle with France: "Never succumb to the enemy; it is a struggle for your existence as a nation; and if you must die, die with the sword in your hand; but I have no fears whatever for the result. There is a salient, living principle of energy in the public mind of England, which only requires proper direction to enable her to withstand this or any other ferocious foe. Persevere, therefore, till this tyranny be overpast." BURKE knew the race and he reckoned rightly. England did persevere, the salient, living principle of energy failed not; and eighteen years after these words were uttered, they received their crowning verification on the field of Waterloo. A year more or less, or even a decade more or less, is nothing, as measured against the mighty career a nation insures for itself by fidelity through sad trials, to the end. The great body of our people, all through the North, are thus attesting their fidelity. The memory of it will be cherished with gratitude and praise by untold generations.

Blunders of the Confederate Cotton Loan.

We are not surprised to learn that the Confederate Loan, lately negotiated in Europe with so much éclat, is already limping on the Exchanges, and is regarded as the lightest of fancy stocks. From a premium of 5 per cent., at the closing of the books, it has fallen in a few days to 2 per cent. below par, and is reported dull and declining. It went up like a rocket and must come down like a stick.

The German-French banker, who so glorified himself on the success of this loan, which he had put upon the market, was premature in his exultation. He had begun to expand himself, and undertake still greater enterprises, on the fame of the Confederate Loan. But the sudden disgrace of his bantling, and the recoil on his reputation from the disclosures that are making, will probably check the career upon which he supposed himself to be entering so brilliantly.

The most damaging fact against the loan, not discovered until too late, is that its proceeds were almost wholly absorbed in paying off old debts of the Confederate Government. Those secession traders of England who have, for two years, been supporting the rebellion by furnishing it with powder, shot, shell, muskets, cannons, and whatever else they could run through the blockade, and those ship-builders like LAIRD, who have been building piratical cruisers like the Alabama to prey upon American commerce, got tired of the heavy load they were carrying in behalf of the rebels. It occurred to them, therefore, as the prospects of the rebellion were looking darker instead of brighter, that it would be well to shift the burden from their shoulders as soon as possible. Luckily for them, leading English and French journals—like the Times and the Moniteur—had spread abroad a sufficient misrepresentation of facts regarding rebel prospects, and had instilled an Anti-American prejudice deep enough, to enable them to float a loan large enough for their purposes.

To keep down suspicions, M. EHRLANGER, a Continental money changer, was procured to bring out the loan. The mercantile and ship-building creditors of the Confederacy were ready and enthusiastic claquers of the negotiation. The security of hypothecated cotton was declared to be undoubted—the price of the staple was put low—the margin for profit was immense—and, with the means that the loan would yield, the blockade was to be broken by the Confederates, and the cotton brought quickly to market. This was a glowing picture, and, under the high pressure of puffing and appealing adroitly to the secession prejudices of the ruling and shopkeeping classes, the loan ran up to a high premium, was all taken, and pronounced the greatest financial success of the day.

The cunning creditors of the Confederates have won their game—they have thrown upon a parcel of fools in England and France the burden of debt themselves had been carrying, and are now prepared to take whatever course in the future policy or interest may dictate. The Confederates get no new money—their means of offence or defence are not strengthened—while their credit, or what might have been their credit, built upon their most available resources, is wounded in limine and left floundering among the "lame ducks" of foreign stock boards.

Evidently, "somebody has blundered" in this Confederate loan business. Taking it as a trick of old creditors to get their debts paid, it was a villainous fraud upon the greenhorns who were stimulated to subscribe. Regarding it as a fair effort to raise money by Confederate agents, it was ridiculously ineffective in the amount asked for, as it left nothing over after paying pressing debts, to carry on the war with. After the train had been laid, and the manipulations of the Press achieved, and the claquers of the Exchange posted in their parts, it would have been just as easy, as the event proved, to have run up subscriptions to a loan of $100,000,000 as to one of $15,000,000. M. EHRLANGER's commissions would then have been something worth having, instead of the paltry $5,000,000 which he is said to have obtained; and the Confederate Government would have had a respectable sum, probably $50,000,000, at least, after paying LAIRD & Co. for ships heretofore built, and secession merchants for war material heretofore had. With this sum they could have worked wonders with the unpurchaseable "neutrals" who compose the English and French Cabinets. The Jecker bonds, that have sent a French army into Mexico, were never so potent as $50,000,000 in cash would have been.

Evidently the Confederate Government has missed its golden opportunity of procuring a foreign loan. Credit is like the bloom on the cheek of a peach—once hardly rubbed, it can never be restored. The securities of a Government, once discredited and bandied about in weak hands among the gamblers of stock boards, have lost their best chance of obtaining the favor of the capitalists whose purses are supposed to control the destiny of nations. The blunder of the Confederate agents, or of EHRLANGER, or of the secession sympathizers of Europe, in the matter of this loan, is enormous and irreparable. It has paid old debts only. It gives no new means of hostilities, and it destroys all hope of future similar negotiations.

THE FRENCH IN MEXICO.—Nothing of late years has proved so prolific in canards as the French invasion of Mexico. Times without number, we have been called upon to contradict the most absurd stories about the progress of French arms in the neighboring republic, put forth with all gravity of style and particularity of detail. Three or four times recently we have had reports positively asserting the capture of the cities of Puebla and Mexico by the French army. These reports originate, it appears, with the French Consuls stationed at Mobile and San Francisco; and so methodically and periodically do they come from these quarters, that we are disposed to believe interested parties have a special purpose in deceiving the American and European public.

Yesterday the Press of the country was saddled with an expensive telegraphic dispatch all the way from San Francisco, purporting to give in detail the circumstances of the bombardment of Puebla by the French, and their occupation of all the fortifications surrounding that city. It is stated that this dispatch, dated City of Mexico, April 1, was received in San Francisco April 19. According to its tenor, the bombardment of Puebla commenced on the 20th of March, and was going on at the latest dates.

Now we have news by a French steamer at Havana down to April 4 from Vera Cruz, and April 2 from Puebla; at which latter date, although the French army had occupied several strategic points in the neighborhood of Puebla, no bombardment had taken place, nor was there any evidence of an immediate and vigorous movement of the French army to that end.

Whatever may be the purpose of interested parties in willfully and systematically attempting to deceive the public in the shameful manner alluded to, we aver that their want of common sense is only equaled by their lack of principle; and we protest against such systematic humbugging of the Press and public, especially as we have to pay the expense.

A MOB OF LADIES.—The highest style of mob known until recently was the famous Boston "mob of gentlemen," costumed in broadcloth, with stovepipes on their heads, pumps on their feet, and white kids on their hands. But they have done better than this in Georgia. The Atlanta Intelligencer describes the recent riot in that city for procuring food as being gotten up and put through by ladies. "A number of ladies," it is said, "were seen perambulating our streets until they came up to a provision store," which they entered, preceded by a "tall lady, on whose countenance rested care and determination." She demanded the price of bacon, and being told it was $1 10 per pound, she remonstrated; but the shopkeeper remained inexorable, when the "tall lady" drew a long navy repeater, and the rest of them plundered the store, "giving preference to the bacon." The editor says that the "scene moved the sympathies of his soul," and that a number of gentlemen, "feeling a deep sympathy for these ladies," raised a small sum of money for them.

The papers of Virginia and North Carolina, in mentioning the bread riots of the gentler sex of rebels that have taken place in the towns of those States, speak of them as "mobs of women," "mobs of females," "mobs of soldiers' wives," &c.; and one rebel newspaper has been unchivalrous enough to characterize them in a style still less flattering than these. But the Georgia journal boldly declares that the riot was the work of a mob of "ladies." We confess we also are sorry that the ladies of the South should be reduced to such straits as to make rioting necessary. Every one remembers how the Southern women stimulated the war fever in its early stages; how, at the bombardment of Sumter, two short years ago, the fashionable belles of Charleston crowded in thousands on the Battery, on the streets, on the housetops, and on every spot on which they could catch a glimpse of the battle; how their faces beamed with joy, and their delicate hands waved wildly the emblems of secession and slaughter, which fluttered also on their bosoms and bonnets. Secession was an exhilarating draught, an empty-headed madness, for the ladies of the South then—it is a draught of despair, a hungry and sorrowful fury for them now.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 20.

THE NEGRO TROOPS IN FLORIDA.

L. D. STICKNEY, United States Tax Collector of Florida and South Carolina, reported to-day to the Government the absolute success of the experiment of arming and organizing the slaves. He says that the late expedition which took and held Jacksonville, Fla., was composed entirely of black troops. They held the post two weeks, were engaged almost every day with superior numbers of the rebels, and in every instance drove them. Afterward, these black troops were reinforced by a white regiment—the Sixth Connecticut Volunteers—by no means favorable to negro soldiers. In an engagement with the rebel cavalry and artillery, the Sixth Connecticut supported the First and Second South Carolina (colored.) After a severe engagement, in which the blacks were victorious, this white regiment declared it had no further prejudices against negroes who showed such pluck.

While our troops occupied Jacksonville, the rebel camp was eight miles distant. The commander of the United States forces, before making an attack, wished to destroy a railroad bridge three miles in the rear of the enemy. A negro volunteered to perform this perilous feat. Taking three days' rations in his knapsack, a bottle of turpentine, a box of matches and a pair of Colt's revolvers, he disappeared at night. The third day after he returned, having burned the bridge and reconnoitered the enemy's camp, so as to furnish much valuable information.

A former expedition up St. Mary's River, by five companies of the first regiment South Carolina Volunteers, furnished equally conclusive evidence of the bravery of the negro troops. Marching at night through a thick wood, they were attacked by rebel cavalry. At the first discharge one man was killed and four wounded; but instead of a panic, the blacks promptly returned the fire, emptying twelve rebel saddles at the first discharge. The uniform testimony of all the officers is that the colored troops, when brought under fire, need check more than spur.

THE BLACK SURGEON.

The newly commissioned black surgeon, Dr. AUGUSTA CANADA, appeared on the streets to-day in Major's uniform. He has been assigned to ULLMANN's brigade.

HON. R. J. WALKER.

Hon. R. J. WALKER has not, as stated, gone to Europe as agent for the Government in connection with a loan, but on behalf of a Quicksilver Mining Company. He also will act as agent of this Government for the purpose of effecting arrangements to secure uniform weights and measures and coin between the United States and Great Britain, and thus equalize exchange for the convenience of commerce.

HON. PRESTON KING.

Hon. PRESTON KING is yet in Washington. Since the adjournment of the Senate he has traveled hundreds of miles to visit every regiment in which his Northern New-York constituents are represented. He pays frequent visits to the Army of the Potomac, and carries courage and comfort wherever he goes.

JUSTICE TO WRONGED OFFICERS.

Gen. HOOKER, in Order No. 43, published on Saturday, has done justice to a large number of wronged officers, and directed a stinging censure where it was much needed. He says:

"It appearing from the reports of Commissioners duly appointed, and official information otherwise furnished, that the absence of the following named officers announced for dismissal in General Orders No. 20, March 5, 1863, from these headquarters, can be satisfactorily accounted for, they are relieved from all further liability under the provisions of that order.

Twelfth Army Corps—Capt. A. B. Botsford, Seventy-eighth New-York Volunteers; Assistant Surgeon J. H. Hassenplug, One Hundred and Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers—artillery reserve; First-Lieut. Bayard Wilkeson, Fourth United States artillery.

II. The Commanding General takes this occasion to censure in the strongest terms the inexcusable conduct of all those through whose negligence or indifference, in not forwarding the proper information to these headquarters, officers who had been honorably discharged for wounds received in battle, or sickness induced by camp exposure, or who had lain down their lives in the service of their country, or whose absence from their duties in the field was justified by orders they had received, have been held up to public remark and reproach as 'absent without leave.' The records of some of the regiments appear to have been kept in a manner highly discreditable to the Commanding and Staff Officers charged with the important and responsible duty of collecting and arranging the data which make up the military history of the individuals composing their respective commands. Where this trust is neglected the reputation and rights of officers and men must necessarily be endangered."

LOSS OF THE UNITED STATES TRANSPORT STEAMER UNION.

The Navy Department has received a letter from Acting Admiral LEE, dated off Wilmington, April 18, including a report from Commander SCOTT, of the United States steamer Maratanza, near Cape Fear River, stating that on the 2d inst. the United States transport steamer Union hove in sight in distress. In the afternoon it was found necessary to abandon and destroy her by fire to prevent her drifting ashore to the rebels. All the officers and men were saved. She was bound from Hilton Head to Beaufort, N. C.

THE NAVAL ACADEMY.

Commodore BLAKE, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, writes to the Navy Department, that the fever at that institution has entirely disappeared, and that the sick list is smaller than during any previous season.

ITEMS OF REBEL NEWS.

From the Charleston Mercury of April 11 we learn that Fort Sumter was struck forty times; that one 10-inch gun was temporarily disabled; one columbiad, old pattern, burst; one 7-inch rifled gun dismounted by recoil, and one gun disabled a few moments by the fracture of the elevating screw. One Sergeant and four privates were hurt by the fall of bricks, &c. A drummer-boy and negro were wounded by fragments of shell. A gun specially relied on in Sumter to use up the Keokuk was a Brooks, throwing 7 inch flat headed bolts of chilled iron.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 16th admits that the war may last at least two years longer.

Food in Virginia is unquestionably scarce. The Richmond Sentinel of the 16th says:

"A merchant informs us that one of his customers, who was in the city when the President's address appeared, was deeply stirred, and said he had three or four thousand pounds of bacon at home, reserved for his servants; but that they must now find other food, for the soldiers must have the bacon. We know gentlemen in this city, contributing out of their scanty supplies a portion for the soldiers, declaring that the dear fellows must be well fed, whoever else may go upon short rations."

THE WAR IN ARKANSAS.

Three Thousand Rebels Attack Fayetteville and are Repulsed.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, April 20.

Telegrams received at Headquarters, to-day, say that Fayetteville, Ark., was attacked before daylight on Saturday morning, by about 3,000 armed rebels, with four pieces of artillery. Our force was less than 2,000, part of whom were unarmed. The rebels were repulsed with considerable loss. Our loss was 5 killed and 17 wounded.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, April 20.

Additional advices from Fayetteville say the fight there on Saturday lasted about four hours. The rebels were commanded by Gen. CABELL, and retreated in disorder toward Ozark. Our troops were all Arkansas recruits, under Col. HARRISON. They were poorly armed and equipped, and without artillery.

THE WAR IN TENNESSEE.

Two Successful Attacks Upon Rebel Camps.

LOUISVILLE, Monday, April 20.

Col. GRAHAM on Saturday attacked the rebels near Celnia, Tenn., killing seven, and destroying their camp. On Sunday he crossed the Cumberland, and attacked the rebels there, killing thirty, and routing the remainder, and is now in hot pursuit. The National loss is one killed.

Col. RILEY attacked the rebels, yesterday, at Cruslboro, on the Cumberland, killing one and capturing sixteen. He is now chasing the remainder. There were no National casualties.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Important Order from Gen. Hooker Regarding Re-enlistments.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Monday, April 20.

The following orders are published to-day:

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, April 20.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 44.—In order that no misunderstanding may exist as to the course to be pursued with regard to regiments whose terms of service are about expiring, the following rules will govern the action of Corps Commanders and others in the matter:

First—Where companies and regiments reënlist after the expiration of their present term of service, in accordance with the provisions of General Order No. 85, of April 2d, 1863, from the War Department, the regiment and company officers will be retained. The regiment will have a furlough for the time specified in the order, and will be allowed to proceed at the public expense, with their arms and equipments to the place of their enrollment, the date of their furlough being two years or nine months, as the case may be, from the date of the original muster into the service of the United States.

Second—Where the regiments in a body decline to reënlist, the officers and men will be mustered out at the expiration of two years, or nine months from the date of their actual muster into the service of the United States. Their arms and equipments will be turned into the Ordnance Officer of the division to which the troops belong, and transportation and subsistence supplied to the place of their enrollment by the Quartermaster and Subsistence Departments.

Third—In cases where less than one-half the men reënlist, the proportion of officers to be retained, and the selection of those to be retained in service, will be determined by corps Commanders in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 3 of General Orders No. 86 of April 2, 1863, from the War Department, the rank, proportion and number of officers to be retained with regiments where reënlistments are partial, is left to the discretion of corps Commanders.

Fourth—The portion of the bounty provided in General Orders No. 85, April 2, 1863, from the War Department, for reënlistment, will be entered upon the muster rolls, to be repaid at the first payment after the return of the men from furlough.

Fifth—In regiments where two years' men and men enlisted for three years or the war, are associated together, special recommendations may be made to these headquarters for furloughs to the latter, when the number of two years' men reënlisted may, in the opinion of the corps commanders, justify the indulgence.

Sixth—Where the two years' regiments do not reenlist as above provided for, corps commanders will direct the transfer of men enlisted for three years or the war in such regiments, to three years' regiments from the same State; or if their numbers are sufficient, these men, at the discretion of their corps commanders, will be formed into battalions.

Seventh—This order, as well as the following order from the War Department, will be read at the head of each company of the two years' and nine months' regiments serving in the army.

IMPORTANT FROM EASTERN VIRGINIA.

Heavy Skirmishing on the Nansemond River.

OUR GUNBOATS SHELLING THE REBELS.

Capture of Six Pieces of Artillery and 200 Rebel Prisoners.

FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, April 20.

Heavy firing has been going on for the last twenty-four hours on the Nansemond River, occasioned from our gunboats shelling out the rebels, who are attempting to plant batteries at different points on the river.

Last night the Eighty-ninth New-York and Eighth Connecticut regiments, aided by the gunboats, captured a rebel battery of six pieces of artillery, together with 200 prisoners, taken from the Forty-fourth Alabama regiment.

"Gen. GETTY, in conjunction with the gunboats, under Lieut. LAMSON, has just stormed the heavy battery at the West Branch, and captured six guns and 200 of the Forty-fourth Alabama regiment. They crossed in boats. The Eighty-ninth New-York and the Eighth Connecticut were the storming party.

FORTRESS MONROE, Saturday, April 18.

Major-Gen. DIX and Staff left this morning for Suffolk.

FORTRESS MONROE, Sunday, April 19.

Cannonading was distinctly heard last night, and most of the time to-day, on the Nansemond River, where our gunboats are engaged in shelling out squads of rebels, who are attempting to plant batteries on the banks of the river, and who thus far have been defeated.

Gen. DIX and Staff left, this morning, on the Henry Burden, for the Nansemond. The General returned late last evening from Suffolk. He keeps a vigilant eye upon the enemy's movements about this Department.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

ALBANY, Monday, April 20.

The Conference Committee on the Harbor Defence bill made the following report:

That we agree upon the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the New-York Harbor and frontier defences, the same to be under the direction of the Governor, Comptroller and Senator MORGAN.

The Conference Committee on the Canal bill made a report as follows:

That we are against the proposition to enlarge the locks west of Montezuma this year; but recommend that there be a survey of the proposed work, and request that a report of the cost, &c., be made to the next Legislature.

The bill appropriating $500,000 for the purchase of arms, was amended by reducing the appropriation to $158,000, and ordered to a third reading.

Resolutions directing a survey of the Canal locks, with a view to their enlargement, and directing a report of the same to be made to the next Legislature, were adopted.

A resolution inviting the General Government to detail an Engineer to act with the State Surveyor in the survey was also adopted.

BILLS PASSED.

Incorporating the Olive Benevolent Society, for the improvement of feeders on the Genesee Valley Canal; relative to statistics of crime in New-York; establishing a Board of Officers of the First Division National Guards; for the protection of oyster planting in the town of Hempstead; to build a weigh lock on the Oswego Canal; the annual supply bill, as agreed upon by the Conference Committee.

The bill empowering the Mayor and Comptroller of New-York to appoint thirty Tax Marshals, was amended by providing that the salary of their clerks be the same as the salary of Clerks of the Marine Court, and passed; also the bill authorizing the building of three iron bridges over the canal at Rochester, and the East New-York and Jamaica railroad bill.

EVENING SESSION.

The resolution authorizing the Superintendent of the Banking Department to examine into the condition of the savings banks, was adopted.

The bill amending the Excise Law was ordered to a third reading.

An amendment was adopted that where remonstrances in writing signed by a majority of persons voting at the last general election in any election district, shall request no licenses to be granted in such district, no license shall be granted.

ASSEMBLY.

ALBANY, Monday, April 20.

The bill authorizing the formation of Banking Associations, under the Congressional Banking act, was recommitted.

The bill appropriating the surplus of the Canal revenue was ordered to a third reading.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for recording Internal Revenue Stamps.

Relative to letters of administration on estates of non-residents.

Relative to labor contracts for State Prisons.

Relative to moneys and property in custody of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Incorporating the American and Mexican Railroad Land Telegraph Company. Lost. A motion to reconsider tabled.

Amending the Revised Statutes of 1860.

Relative to assignments. Lost.

The bill amending the Militia Laws favorably reported.

EVENING SESSION.

The Assembly met at 7 o'clock.

The Grinding Committee reported the following bills:

Preventing the desertion, enticing away, and harboring of seamen.

Amending the charter of the Corn Exchange Insurance Company.

The Special Order, viz., the consideration of the report of the Callicot Investigating Committee, was then taken up.

Mr. CALLICOT opened the discussion, contending that Mrs. WOOD's debt was an ordinary one, out of which no criminal prosecution could grow. The $1,200 was not received from HARRIS until Jan. 19, three days after his nomination for Speaker; and therefore could not have been a bribe to accept the nomination. He accepted the nomination as the only means to obtain a speedy organization of the House. The charges were a conspiracy to ruin him in revenge for his having become a candidate of the Union Republican party.

Mr. T. C. FIELDS followed, contending that the Committee had denied him an opportunity to prove all the charges; that he could have fully proven all the specifications; that he had conclusively proved that CALLICOT had received $200 as a bribe from officers of the Republican General Committee, and the draft on which this money was drawn was dated Jan. 15, although the money was not paid until the 19th; that if permitted, he could have proved that CALLICOT had received $2,400 additional from two different gentlemen.

ONE O'CLOCK A. M., 21ST.—The debate was continued by Messrs. DAVIS and PRINDLE in vindication of the Speaker, and Mr. MURPHY for the resolution of expulsion.

The Gold Bill.

ALBANY, Monday, April 20.

The Senate and Assembly Bank Committees, after a consultation, have agreed to recommend the Senate Gold bill, prohibiting banks from loaning on gold or bills of exchange, under a penalty of forfeiture of charter, and requiring reports to the Bank Superintendent.

Amusements.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—A dramatization of the last sensation novel—Aurora Floyd—was produced at this theatre, last evening. MATILDA HERON portrayed the part of the heroine in a highly effective manner. It was not Miss Braddon's "Aurora Floyd," but an original creation of the actress, it was vividly conceived and admirably represented. The character for which Mr. SHEWELL was cast—John Mellish, the Yorkshire squire—was, in consequence of his sickness, given to Mr. HARRY PEARSON, who played it very finely, and Mr. GEORGE JAMIESON gave a graphic and powerful sketch of Stephen Hargreaves, the "lofty." The piece is terribly too long. Human endurance has its limits, and they do not extend beyond 11 o'clock. When the curtain falls at nearly 12, it is almost superfluous to suggest to a manager a liberal application of the scissors

WINTER GARDEN.—Mr. L. P. BARRETT has a benefit at the Winter Garden to-night. The adaptation of VICTOR HUGO's "Ruy Blas," made for FECHTER, the French actor who plays in English, will be done for the first time in New-York. It is a splendid piece, and ought to have been translated long ago for Mr. WALLACK. Mr. BARRETT is a performer of positive ability, and will interpret the character of Ruy Blas with point and vigor. When at BURTON's, several seasons ago, he was a great favorite, and achieved successes which will not be easily forgotten. He deserves the appreciation of a crowded and friendly audience.

GOTTSCHALK IN BROOKLYN.—To-night, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Mr. GOTTSCHALK, assisted by artists of eminent talent, will give the second in his series of concerts. A most attractive programme is offered, and a large house should be the consequence.

THE GERMAN OPERA.—We have only room to say that "Fra Diavolo" was given last night at the Brooklyn Academy. The work was never better done, and the large audience was enthusiastically demonstrative.

NEW-YORK SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES.

THE NEW-YORK SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES is published THIS MORNING, and may be had at the counter of the publication office in wrappers ready for mailing. In addition to the latest intelligence by telegraph up to the moment of going to press, there will be found in the current number full details of all military movements in the different departments from the pens of our special correspondents. Also, all official orders, reports and documents, and the latest and fullest Washington news, European news, with graphic letters from our correspondents in London and Paris, giving the tone of public feeling abroad, is made a special and permanent feature. In addition to Editorials on all the current topics of the day, the SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES has a page of carefully prepared commercial matter, giving the latest financial news and market reports: items of agricultural and domestic interest, compiled from sources many of which are otherwise inaccessible to the American reader; and marriages and deaths of the week.

The "SEMI-WEEKLY RECORD," or news summary—being a careful synopsis and digest of the news of the day, both rebellion and general—is alone worth double the subscription price to the paper, as it preserves in a condensed and conveniently classified form all news of interest, and must prove valuable as a record to all time.

NEW TESTIMONIALS

NEW-YORK, April 18, 1863.

A little daughter of mine has been affected with a troublesome discharge from both ears, the result of scarlet fever. Dr. Lighthill, under whose care I placed her, has removed the discharge completely, and improved her hearing.

W. H. RAYNOR, No. 6 Pine-st.

NEW-YORK, April 18, 1863.

A member of my family had had a troublesome affection of the ears since infancy. I was recommended to place her under the treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and I am happy to state that he has been completely successful in her case. Those who desire to know the particulars may apply at my residence.

JOHN TURNBULL, No. 41 5th-st.

From Rev. John Nott, D. D., Professor in Union College, Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, Jan. 17, 1863.

Dr. Lighthill—

SIR: Having been cured by you of a discharge in an ear, which has been very offensive of late, and as far back as I can remember, always more or less so; and having been entirely restored to hearing since under your care, I feel that I cannot withhold this acknowledgment from any use it may be to others, especially as I have applied in vain to my family physician and other physicians of reputation. Yours, truly, JOHN NOTT.

CATARRH CURED.

From Rev. P. R. Russell, Lynn, Mass.

I have been much troubled with catarrh of the worst type for some twenty years. It gradually grew worse, producing cough and hoarseness, destroying the sense of smell, and breaking down my general health to such a degree as to compel me to resign my pastorate, and suspend public speaking.

I made diligent use of the usual remedies, such as snuffs of different kinds, nitrate of silver, tar water, olive tar and inhalations, but without any very salutary effects. Last Summer I heard of Dr. Lighthill's successful mode of treating catarrh, visited him, and put myself under his treatment. I began immediately to improve, and this improvement has gone on to the present time. My catarrh has gradually melted away, my cough has disappeared, my voice has become natural, and I am once more able to preach the blessed Gospel. Let me advise all troubled with catarrhal difficulties to apply to Dr. Lighthill.

P. R. RUSSELL.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 1, 1862.

NEW-YORK, June 29, 1862.

Dr. Lighthill:

DEAR SIR: I am pleased to be able to testify to the efficacy of your treatment in the case of my wife, whose hearing in one ear you succeeded in restoring, after treatment of various kinds had been applied in vain. I may futhermore state that her hearing remains good up to the present time, though it is several years, since she has been under your care.

E. CLAYBURGH, No. 141 Duane-st.

NEW-YORK, July 28, 1862.

I hereby certify that I have suffered during many years from trouble in hearing—one ear at last became entirely deaf, and the other so bad as to render conversation very difficult. I applied to Dr. Lighthill, of No. 34 St. Mark's-place, who, in a short time, and without pain, restored to me the use of my ears, so that I can now hear perfectly well.

J. BISCO, No. 158 East 23d-st.

METROPOLITAN HOTEL, NEW-YORK, April 1, 1862.

DEAR SIR: I take much pleasure in testifying to the professional skill exhibited by you in your treatment of a case of severe inflammation of the throat and ear with which I have lately been afflicted. Upon coming under your charge I was immediately relieved and speedily cured of a most aggravated complaint, which several physicians had previously sought in vain to mitigate.

As I am somewhat of a stranger in the City, I would state that you are at liberty to substantiate my statements, if necessary, by reference to my relatives, Mr. A. V. Stout, President of the Shoe and Leather Bank of New-York, and to Mr. Everett Clapp, of the Western Transportation Company, No. 1 Coenties-slip.

With much esteem, I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
FRED. M. HANKS.

To Dr. LIGHTHILL, No. 34 St. Marks-place, New-York.

No. 12 CORTLANDT-ST., NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1863.

DR. E. B. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: It is with the kindest feelings toward you, and hoping to do service to some one who is afflicted, that I forward the inclosed document to you.

To whom it may concern: I am personally acquainted with the success which attended Dr. Lighthill's treatment in a case of discharge from the ear and chronic inflammation of the throat, and would be pleased to give further information on application.

V. D. W. WEEKES.

No. 73 GRAND-ST., NEWBURGH, N. Y., Dec. 23, 1862.

I placed my wife under the care of Dr. Lighthill for deafness in one ear of nearly three years' standing, accompanied by constant noises. I am happy to state that her hearing is now entirely restored, and the noises removed. Those residing in New-York who are desirous of further information may apply to my brother-in-law, Capt. William Edwards, at No. 95 East 34th-st., who is acquainted with the circumstances of the case.

FRANCIS GOULDY.

I have been suffering for some time with noise in my head, and deafness. Having applied to Dr. Lighthill, I have great pleasure in saying that he has completely relieved me, so that now I can hear as well as ever, and am not troubled with the noise in my head.

I may also mention that a young man named Henry Laws, staying with me, was also afflicted in a similar manner, and Dr. Lighthill was equally successful in his case. JOHN MURDOCK, No. 197 Fulton-st.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 2, 1863.

No. 42 FIFTH-ST., NEW-YORK, June 25, 1862.

DR. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: I take pleasure in testifying to the remarkable skill and judgment you displayed in the case of my daughter, who had been partially deaf, accompanied by discharge from the ears, since early infancy, and is now, thanks to your treatment, able to hear as well as any one, while her ears are free from the discharge. Although it is nearly two years since she has been under your care, her hearing remains as good, and her ears as sound, as the day she left you.

O. S. HOLLY.

"A smile was on her lip—health was in her look, strength was in her step, and in her hands—PLANTATION BITTERS."

A few bottles of Plantation Bitters
Will cure Nervous Headache.
Will cure Cold Extremities and Feverish Lips.
Will cure Sour Stomach and Fetid Breath.
Will cure Flatulency and Indigestion.
Will cure Nervous Affections.
Will cure Excessive Fatigue and Short Breath.
Will cure Pain over the Eyes.
Will cure Mental Despondency.
Will cure Prostration, Great Weakness.
Will cure Sallow Complexion, Weak Bowels, &c.
Which are the evidences of
LIVER COMPLAINT AND DYSPEPSIA.

It is estimated that seven-tenths of all adult ailments proceed from a diseased and torpid liver. The biliary secretions of the liver overflowing into the stomach poison the entire system and exhibit the above symptoms.

After long research, we are able to present the most remarkable cure for these horrid nightmare diseases the world has ever produced. Within one year, over six hundred and forty thousand persons have taken the Plantation Bitters, and not an instance of complaint has come to our knowledge!

It is a most effectual tonic and agreeable stimulant, suited to all conditions of life.

The reports that it relies upon mineral substances for its active properties, are wholly false. For the public satisfaction, and that patients may consult their physicians, we append a list of its components.

CALISAYA BARK—Celebrated for over two hundred years in the treatment of Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Weakness, &c. It was introduced into Europe by the Countess, wife of the Viceroy of Peru, in 1640, and afterwards sold by the Jesuits for the enormous price of its own weight in silver, under the name of Jesuit's Powders, and was finally made public by Louis XVI., King of France. Humboldt makes especial reference to its febrifuge qualities during his South American travels.

CASCARILLA BARK—For diarrhea, colic and diseases of the stomach and bowels.

DANDELION—For inflammation of the loins and dropsical affections.

CAMOMILE FLOWERS—For enfeebled digestion.

LAVENDER FLOWERS—Aromatic, stimulant and tonic—highly invigorating in nervous debility.

WINTERGREEN—For scrofula, rheumatism, &c.

ANISE—An aromatic carminative; creating flesh, muscle and milk; much used by mothers nursing.

Also, clove-buds, orange, carraway, coriander, snake-root, &c.

S. T.—1860—X.

Another wonderful ingredient, of Spanish origin, imparting beauty to the complexion and brilliancy to the mind, is yet unknown to the commerce of the world, and we withhold its name for the present.

IMPORTANT CERTIFICATES.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1861.

MESSRS. P. H. DRAKE & Co.: I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia for three or four years, and had to abandon my profession. About three months ago I tried the Plantation Bitters, and to my great joy, I am now nearly a well man. I have recommended them in several cases, and, as far as I know, always with signal benefit.

I am respectfully yours, Rev. J. S. CATHORN.

PHILADELPHIA, 10th Month, 17th Day, 1863.

RESPECTED FRIEND: My daughter has been much benefitted by the use of thy Plantation Bitters. Thou wilt send me two bottles more.

Thy friend,
ASA CURRIN.

SHERMAN HOUSE, CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 11, 1863.

MESSRS. P. H. DRAKE & Co.: Please send us another twelve cases of your Plantation Bitters. As a morning appetizer, they appear to have superseded everything else, and are greatly esteemed.

Yours, &c.,
GAGE & WAITE.

Arrangements are now completed to supply any demand for this article, which, from lack of Government stamps, has not heretofore been possible.

The public may rest assured that in no case will the perfectly pure standard of the Plantation Bitters be departed from. Every bottle bears the fac simile of our signature on a steel plate engraving, or it cannot be genuine.

VANITY FAIR, believing that it is the duty of the patriot to forego every other consideration for the time being, and to strike at the heart of this rebellion, until it is thoroughly crushed, will lend its humble aid to sustain the Government in this necessary work, and at the same time pay attention to our enemies elsewhere, making the paper in every particular,

THOROUGHLY NATIONAL.

Remember, this is the only

ORIGINAL, HUMOROUS AND SATIRICAL ILLUSTRATED PAPER published in America; every article and every illustration being prepared expressly for it.

Our Engravings can be found nowhere else. In every respect they are strictly original, not transfers from Punch or other foreign papers, nor reproductions for the tenth time from old blocks, made to do duty under new titles, or, when orignal, engraved by unskillful, cheap workmen, but every one is the creation of a superior artist for the special number in which it appears, engraved by first-class artists, AND IS NEVER USED THE SECOND TIME ON THE PAPER.

The paper will be published every Saturday, and will be for sale everywhere, one week preceding its date, at SIX CENTS per copy, but those who wish to sustain it will do so more thoroughly by subscribing, and remitting us THREE DOLLARS, for which the paper will be sent one year, post paid.

SCRANTON COAL AT AUCTION.

OFFICE OF THE DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN R. R. CO., NO. 35 WILLIAM-ST., NEW-YORK, April 14, 1863.

In continuation of the system of monthly auction sales, this Company will offer at public auction, on WEDNESDAY, April 22, 1863, at 12 o'clock, noon, at the room now used as the Merchants' Exchange, Nos. 26 and 28 Exchange-place, corner of William-st., by SIMEON DRAPER, auctioneer,

THIRTY THOUSAND TONS OF FRESH MINED SCRANTON COAL,

embracing all the usual sizes, and deliverable at their depot, Elizabethport, N. J., after the 1st of May next. They will repeat such auction sales on or about the 20th of each month, during the year 1863.

The sale will be positive. Each lot put up will be sold to the highest bidder; no bids, in any form whatever, being made for account of or on behalf of the Company.

Fifty cents per ton, in bankable funds, to be paid at the time and place of sale, and the balance in like funds, on receiving the order for the coal, which must be called for within ten days thereafter, and the coal taken away within thirty days from the day of sale, unless navigation is obstructed. Buyers who wish, however, can have an additional thirty days for taking the delivery of their purchases, by making a further deposit of fifty cents per ton, within the ten days above specified. Interest, at 7 per cent. per annum, will in such case be charged on the balance, from the time stipulated for payment until paid; and twenty-five cents per ton to cover the expense of stocking the coal, both to be paid on delivery of order.

The other conditions of sale will be substantially those hitherto accepted by all purchasers, by private contract, of Coal deliverable at Elizabethport, as far as applicable. The coal will be delivered direct from the cars on their arrival from the mines, when practicable—otherwise from the stock. These conditions will be modified to meet the wants of ocean steamers, whose arrival cannot be definitely fixed.

With a reliable avenue from the Lackawanna and Wyoming Valleys to tide-water, open every day in the year, (Sundays excepted,) requiring but twelve hours for the transit of the trains, the advantages of such sales, and the superior condition in which the coal will be delivered, are so apparent, they cannot doubt this mode of selling will commend itself to the favorable consideration of both the trade and consumers, whose coöperation is respectfully invited.

C. R. ROBERT, President.

AGENCY OF THE NATIONAL (FIVE-TWENTY YEAR) LOAN.

OFFICE OF LIVERMORE, CLEWS & CO.,
No. 34 Wall-st., New-York.

We take this means of answering the numerous inquiries made of us respecting the United States Five-Twenty Loan, for which we act as agents.

Said Bonds bear six per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, in gold, on the first of May and the first of November.

Have twenty years to run, but being redeemable at the pleasure of the Government after five years, are designated Five-Twenties.

Are issued both in Coupon and Registered Bonds; the former in denominations of 50's, 100's, 500's, 1,000's; the latter in 50's, 100's, 500's, 1,000's, 5,000's and 10,000's.

The Coupon Bonds have coupons attached for twenty years, and are payable transferable to bearer.

The Registered are issued in the name of the purchaser, (whose name and residence are recorded on the books of the Treasury Department at Washington,) and are only transferable by signature, or power of Attorney, before an authorized Government official. The interest is collected in the same manner at the Sub-Treasury nearest the owner's residence.

Both principal and interest are payable in gold, as provided by act of Congress.

Are, (in common with all Government Bonds,) free from taxation by city, town, county or State; and the income derived therefrom is subject only to one-half of the United States tax levied upon incomes derived from other sources.

The privilege of conversion at par will cease on the 1st of July, 1863.

These Bonds are supplied by us at par and accrued interest in currency—interest commencing to the purchaser upon deposit of the money. Hence, the first coupon falling due, being stamped with the date of the issue of the Bond, will be fractional, instead of three per cent., like the succeeding ones.

We shall shortly be prepared to deliver all the various denominations upon application.

The engravers and printers have been unable to furnish blank bonds to the extent required, but every effort is being made to meet the demand, and it is expected that with the increased force now employed upon them, there will be less delay hereafter.

Orders, by mail or otherwise, accompanied by draft on New-York, or current funds, will be promptly responded to.

CAUTION TO LADIES.

Madame RESTELL, Female Physician, No. 162 Chambers-st., deems it her duty to caution ladies against impostors, who appropriate her advertisements, word for word, merely substituting some ignorant and wholly irresponsible person as "Madame."

These persons have spurious "Female Monthly Pills" and other poisonous compounds to deprive the unwary or the easily duped, as well of their mean as of their health. That ladies may avoid these impositions, Madame Restell feels called upon to give this caution.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with DR. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st. Conducted on the plan of the Hospital des Veneriens, Paris, where those afflicted with any form of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk of exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhea, gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusively devoted to the treatment of these complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution, [illegible] physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The men to consult. Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from two to five days. Established in 1840. N. B.—[illegible] Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should send for a circular. Postage free on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private nature. For 30 years practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one else, and if your purse has been robbed of their money and had your health ruined, call; it will be a little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhea or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to DR. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

MADAME RESTELL, FEMALE PHYSICIAN can be consulted, as usual, at No. 162 Chambers-st., or by letter, and medicine sent by mail. These beams are to be made after the following specifications:

The rail for barbette carriages is a rolled wrought-iron beam, similar in appearance to the "I" shaped beams used in the construction of fire-proof buildings. It is required to be straight and smooth on its surface, and free from flaws, imperfect welds, blisters and cinder streaks. The outer surfaces of the two flanges are planes, parallel to each other and at right angles to the web. The web joins the two flanges along their middle line, leaving them to project equally on each side, and must be without bends or corrugations.

DIMENSION OF BEAMS.

Length of rail	171	inches
Depth between outer surfaces of flanges	15	inches
Width of flanges	5.375	inches
Thickness of flange at outer edge	.75	inch.
Thickness of web	.625	inch.

These beams will be inspected after the following rules: They are to be made of good tough, well-worked, clear iron, the absence of which qualities, (generally indicated by roughness of surface, a by checks, and more marked roughness along the edges of the flanges,) as also flaws or bad welds, blisters and streaks of cinder, will cause their rejection.

1st. They are to be of the required dimensions, and square at the ends.

2d. They are to be straight, and free from short bends in the flanges and web.

3d. The outer plane surfaces of the flanges are to be parallel to each other, and in planes perpendicular to that of the web.

4th. The webs are not to be bent or troughed, as would result from resting the rails along their whole lengths on the edges of the flanges while the webs are too hot to bear their weight.

5th. The flanges are to be perfectly equal on each side of the web.

VARIATIONS ALLOWED IN INSPECTING.

In length of rail	.50 inch
In depth of rail	.10 inch
In thickness of web	.05 inch
In warp or wind, in depth of flange at extreme end of rail	.10 inch
Difference in distance between outer edges of plane surfaces of flanges on different sides of web at any cross section of rail	.10 inch
A straight edge of equal length with the rail placed on the outer edge of the flange should not depart from it at any point more than	.15 inch
A plane surface placed on the web should not depart from it any point more than	.10 inch
A plane surface placed on the plane surface of either flange should not depart from it at any point more than	.10 inch
Departure from square in depth of rail	.15 inch

Specimens of the beams, or drawings of them, can be seen at the United States Arsenals at Fort Monroe, Virginia, Bridesburgh and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Watertown, Massachusetts.

Bidders will state the number of beams they propose to furnish, the time when they will commence the delivery, which should be as early as possible, and the number they can deliver weekly after commencing the delivery, place where they will make them, and the price per pound for which they will deliver them at the point of vessel or railroad shipment nearest to their works.

No bids will be entertained except from persons actually engaged in the manufacture of iron, evidence of which must accompany the bid.

Each party obtaining a contract will be required to enter into bonds, with proper sureties for its faithful fulfillment; and a transfer of the contract to another party will cause its entire forfeiture.

The right is reserved to reject all proposals if the prices are deemed too high, or if for any cause it is not deemed for the public interest to accept them.

Proposals will be sealed and addressed to "GENERAL J. W. RIPLEY, Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D. C.," and will be indorsed "Proposals for Wrought Iron Beams."

THE GREAT UNION MEETING.

when the authority of the Government shall be restored over the whole United States, and we shall again advance in a career of prosperity and of honor, without parallel in the history of the world. [Great applause, and three cheers for JOHN VAN BUREN.]

When Mr. VAN BUREN had retired, and the people had ceased cheering, a series of resolutions were read by Mr. NEHEMIAH KNIGHT, which were adopted unanimously, and were also adopted at the other stands. The third resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the mass assemblage to be held on the 20th inst., be requested to appoint a Committee of twenty-five members of the League, authorized to call a mass assemblage of the loyal citizens of the State of New-York, to be held at Utica, in the County of Oneida, on Wednesday, the 27th day of May next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that said Committee invite the coöperation of delegates from all Loyal Leagues organized in the cities and counties of this State.

When the resolutions had been enthusiastically indorsed, Judge BONNEY came forward and read the following names of gentlemen to compose the Committee named in the last resolution.

COMMITTEE:

John A. Dix, George Opdyke, James Wadsworth, Henry J. Raymond, James T. Brady, Benjamin W. Bonney, Moses Taylor, Robert H. McCurdy, Alexander T. Stewart, James W. White, Edwards Pierrepont, Nehemiah Knight, Samuel Sloan, Leonard W. Jerome, Benjamin R. Winthrop, Charles Gould, Francis B. Cutting, Benjamin F. Manierre, Waldo Hutchins, Andreas Willmann, John Cochrane, John T. Hogeboom, Henry Nicoll, John H. White and the acting President of this meeting.

The above gentlemen were appointed unanimously as they were at the other stands.

The President then announced Hon. JOHN LEE CHAPMAN, Mayor of Baltimore, who was received with immense cheering for himself, for the Union men of Baltimore, and for Maryland.

SPEECH OF THE MAYOR OF BALTIMORE.

Mr. CHAPMAN, when quiet had been restored, addressed his audience as fellow-citizens, saying that he recognized no State lines, no State divisions—he recognized but one country, one Union and one flag, and that was the flag now floating above him. [Great applause and cries of "Bully for Baltimore."] He could not express to them the gratification it afforded him, when sitting in his place in the Common Council of the City of Baltimore, it was announced that the Loyal League of New-York had invited the Mayor and Common Council of Baltimore to meet with them in New-York, to aid and sustain the cause of our common Government and country. [Applause.] It came to him as a voice from the North, through representatives of the North, inviting the Union men of Baltimore, where the blood of patriots was first shed, while they were proceeding to the defence of the National Capital, to unite in expressing devotion to that country which they all loved, and to sustain the Government in its effort to put down those who had risen in arms against it. [Applause.] He came there to say to his fellow-citizens of New-York, "Baltimore is true to the Union. [Great applause.] Maryland is true to the Union and the Government." [Great applause.] Maryland was true, he said, without conditions—true to the utmost she had to sacrifice—the wealth of her citizens, and their lives, if needed, in support of the Government; and if she had any institutions standing in the way of the success of this blessed free Government of ours, she was willing to let them go, rather than that it should be sacrificed. [Great applause—three cheers for gallant Maryland.] They had no Copperheads in Baltimore. [Laughter.] The people there were either for or against the Government—those who were for it, were for it unconditionally, and those who were against it, were against it unconditionally. [Laughter.] He had also heard that there had been talk of compromise—compromise—compromise with what? Why the Confederates claimed Maryland, and Kentucky, and Tennessee, and would these compromisers give over the Union-loving men of those States—the men who had suffered, were now suffering, and were willing to continue to suffer for the Union, if suffering was needed—would they give over those men to the rebels? [Cries of "No, it can't be done," and applause.] Put the rebellion down—even if it took five or ten, or fifteen years to do it, put it down. [Great applause.] The speaker concluded, amid loud cheering, with the well known poem commencing, "Sail on! Oh ship of State!"

SPEECH OF JUDGE OKTEN.

When he had concluded, there were loud calls for Judge OKTEN, of Baltimore, who came forward, but declined making a speech because of extreme hoarseness. He however expressed his delight with what he had seen as the result of an effort of the Union League in New-York to get up a "rouser" in the way of a mass meeting, and he should not fail when he returned home to tell what he had seen. After urging the people to hold Union League meetings every night until the rebellion shall have been crushed, he retired with three rousing cheers from the people.

He was followed by ETHAN ALLEN, who spoke briefly as follows:

Mr. ETHAN ALLEN, Assistant United States District-Attorney, was then introduced, who was received with three enthusiastic cheers.

SPEECH OF HON. ETHAN ALLEN.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Giving to the winds all petty party obligations, we are met to resolve that, "bound together with hooks of steel," all creeds, factions, ages and conditions will unite in one common brotherhood for the safety of our imperilled country. Such a party, formed for such a purpose, for favor and support pleads [illegible] to [illegible]. What our fathers gave, the children should sustain. Let the Judas of our people, in our times surnamed "The Copperhead," be marked [illegible], that he may be stamped by decent men through all future time. [Cries of "That's the talk."] All honor to this anniversary of the great uprising of the loyal North, which proclaimed to the world that freedom, with her legions united as one man, had determined that she or Slavery must leave this land forever. [Applause.] Slavery, black, fiendish and ignorant, has resolved to divide this Republic; and freedom, white, gentle and intelligent, has determined to preserve it. [Cheers.] Under one banner or the other you must take your stand. There is no middle ground. This fight is for a funeral, and either you must bury the foe, or the foe will surely bury you. Away with your hair-splitting theories, legal quibbles and speculations of every kind; I am for the war, no matter what means it employs, no matter what powers it assumes, which teaches the nearest way to the throat of the nation's foe. Oh! for one moment of immortal power, that the strength of the North might be united and be hurled upon the South like a thunderbolt of war. We are told by those, with whom the thought is father to the wish, that we cannot subjugate the South. The loyal patriots of the South we would not, but if by the remark is meant that we cannot subjugate the traitors of the South, it is false. The past two years have given the lie to the assertion. Calls of "That's so." We have subjugated them already in Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland and Florida—half a dozen States—and with God's blessing and the aid of bullet and bayonet, within the next two years we will subjugate them in the half dozen States remaining in rebellion. [Loud applause.] Men of the North, it is for you to say whether you are ready to give up the republic, and accept a monarchy, or, in other words, whether you will exchange your peace, freedom, happiness and prosperity for anarchy, misfortune and ruin. Who is there here so mean that he would willingly survive his country? Who is there here who does not know and feel that if he would have his country live he must arm and strike in her behalf? [Applause.] As citizens who know their duty and dare to do them, let us resolve to-day, that as one man we will stand together to all that is necessary to crush this rebellion, and all will yet be well. In union we are strong, prosperous and free; in disunion we are weak, unfortunate and enslaved. The immutable decrees of God, that right shall triumph over wrong, that truth shall prevail over falsehood, and God shall be victorious over evil, assure us that our republic coming from the conflict the stronger for its trials and still the wonder of the world, will finally award the laurel to its heroes and the halter to its foe.

Mr. ALLEN sat down, amid much enthusiasm.

When Mr. ALLEN had concluded, Hon. LYMAN TREMAINE was called, and after stating that he had already spoken himself hoarse at another stand, spoke briefly but vigorously in favor of using every effort to put down the rebellion.

The next speaker announced was Mr. JAMES EVANS, of England.

SPEECH OF MR. EVANS.

Mr. EVANS, taking the speaker's stand, stated that he was one of the English operatives who had eaten of the bread sent over by the American people in the George Griswold. [Applause.] He was the humble individual who moved the vote of thanks to President LINCOLN in the mass meeting of workmen of England—a meeting of 9,000 operatives inside the hall, and 4,000 outside, who could not get in. [Applause.] He could say to the American people—to those fighting to sustain their Government—that the operatives of England were with them heart and soul. [Great applause.] It was not the working people who favored fitting out Alabamas, it was the mill lords and the aristocracy; the people were with the American Government, and would like to live under it, work for its support, and die for it if need be. [Great applause, and cries of "You are welcome here."] They had, he said, forty thousand men in Lancashire unemployed, and among them even complaints that [illegible] sent to them the South was in the right; but they could not be made to believe it, and were with the Government of America. [Great applause.] If we wanted the services of these men, as workmen and artisans in this country, we need not send out any more flour, only send empty ships over for them, and they would come here and work for their living and be thankful for the privilege. [Great applause.] There were no Copperheads there, he could assure them—[laughter]—among the operatives, but men who were strongly in favor of the legitimate Government of the United States. [Great applause.]

When Mr. EVANS had concluded, the meeting was addressed by Mr. GALE, of Brooklyn, and then adjourned with cheers.

Stand No. 2.

To those unacquainted with the ebb and flow of public meetings, and ignorant of the astonishing manner in which large masses of people drift about on such occasions, it probably seemed that stand No. 2 would be a deserted fixture yesterday. The sturdy body of blue-coats that held possession of it were left alone in their glory throughout all the preliminary stages of the great Union jubilee. The crowd centred its attention wholly on the balcony of the Fifth-avenue Hotel, and the stand which fronted it. There they remained until Gen. SCOTT had made his appearance and the speaking had begun. There, it seemed, they were destined to remain for the remainder of the day. The blue-coats on stand No. 2 yawned and considered themselves aggrieved. Little boys in the street beneath, taking advantage of the pent-up position of their natural enemies, made sarcastic remarks and taunted the men of buttons with inquiries as to whether they weren't afraid that somebody would carry off the stand from under them—hey? At last a little procession was seen making its way to the rescue of these persecuted creatures. It was headed by the venerable DANIEL S. DICKINSON, whose snowy locks seem to call men about him as magically as erst his bugle-horn to Rhoderick Dhu. A great crowd sprang up at once. Whence they came we know not. They were no recreant part of the immense throng in front of the hotel, because there was no thinning of the ranks there. Whatever the origin of this vast body of people, it is certain that they speedily choked up the thoroughfare, and omnibus' occupation was gone in Twenty-third-street. Presently the stand itself was filled to its utmost capacity, and the business of the day was begun.

Judge BONNEY came forward and proposed that Hon. JAMES WADSWORTH should be elected President of the meeting—a proposition which was carried nem. con.

Mr. WADSWORTH, after a few suitable remarks, introduced the "Demosthenes of Democracy."

SPEECH OF HON. DANIEL S. DICKINSON.

At this Hon. DANIEL S. DICKINSON came forward and was received with loud and hearty applause. He thanked the people for the honor they bestowed upon him in designating him as a speaker on such a glorious occasion. He referred eloquently to the great meeting of 1861, when all parties came together of one accord, resolved to avenge the insult upon our national flag at any cost. This was before mean and mercenary politicians had calculated their chances; before greed and avarice had been developed. All were patriots then. On that great occasion he had the honor of standing between the lamented BAKER and the gallant DIX. Many who were present that day in Union-square now lie in bloody graves. Others have fallen, not in the cause of their country, but from their pretensions of patriotism, and are now doing battle in political societies against that cause. There is more necessity of fighting to-day than there was then. We have an enemy at home a great deal more terrible than the ragged rebels who threatened us two years ago. It is treason disguised that we have to encounter now.

There are but two parties now. One the party to sustain the Constitution, and the other the party of treason. That is what this second party is, call it what you will. Its design was to keep on foot machine politicians. If party were swept away, these would cry out like the tired Cæsar: "Help me, Party, or I sink." The name of Copperhead was excellent, as applied to this class. The Copperhead is known as the rattlesnake's mate, and this rebellion was one great rattlesnake. But the proverb shall come to pass and the "heel of the woman's seed shall bruise the head of the serpent. The Copperhead dated very far back. He remembered reading in the Bible that Paul complained that Alexander the Copperhead had done him much evil. He quoted from memory, and he might not have all the words exactly right. If Democracy should receive its death-blow, its expiring cry would be the immortal words of ANDREW JACKSON, "The Union must and shall be preserved." The Republican party was formed from the old Whig party, after the active issues of that day had passed, and of a wing of the old Free Soil party. The people became alarmed at the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and the general desire to stop the extension of Slavery brought this new party into power. The Republican party to-day stands for the loyalty of the country. It stands for the Union and the Constitution. But the Democrats under their spurious organization, and the Republicans under their present organization, must both give way to one great party—the Democratic Republican party. [Applause.] There would only be two classes in the community then, the one loyal, the other disloyal, and there would not be enough left of the latter to enable the naturalist to distinguish the organic remains of the Copperhead leaders. I am radical for laying my hands on all sorts of property for this purpose, real, personal and mixed; and I am conservative for standing on that platform once taken. I am radical for making as big a hole as I can in Slavery, and I am conservative for keeping it a hole. The speaker then referred to the attitude of the foreign Powers. We had expected nothing from the wily and scheming Emperor of the French; but we did think that Great Britain would, at least, not be against us, and would be neutral in fact as well as in word. But the proclamation of England came and we found that we were made the equal of a parcel of thieves and rebels. That our Government, an acknowledged first Power in the world, was considered on the same footing with this army of renegades, who had no more Government than JOHN BROWN had, than the forty thieves had. [Laughter.] If we should turn about and treat them in that way, how would they like it? How Lord PALMERSTON would fume! How RUSSELL would sound! How GLADSTONE would explain! How DISRAELI would sputter! [Laughter.] We want no Generals in the field who are to conquer a peace first and the rebellion afterward. We must not be disheartened at reverses; they are the incidents of the war. Vicksburgh is on our winding way. Richmond is already trembling in the balance before the advance of the intrepid HOOKER. As for Charleston, we have been checked, but not beaten. DUPONT has his eye upon her. The rebels had got "the devil" there, an old and intimate friend, and they had treated him kindly in the hope of the future time when he will have them all. [Laughter.] Let us stand by the Constitution, and all will be well. Mr. DICKINSON closed by reciting a patriotic poem, entitled "Our Union," by ALFRED STREET, of Albany.

SPEECH OF D. D. FIELD, ESQ.

Mr. FIELD referred to the anniversary character of the meeting, and its office as such in calling for reflection on the past and resolution for the future. During the two years which had passed, whatever may have been the errors, the mistakes and the disasters, no one could, reviewing the whole, come to any other conclusion than that this country has shown greater inherent strength than any of us imagined it capable. Our misfortunes have been due to the faults and failures of officials, civil and military—to the weak loyalty of some, and the absolute treason of others—to a faltering support of the Government and a hesitancy in action.

Mr. FIELD was frequently interrupted with applause, and closing was greeted with three cheers.

Hon. HENRY B. STANTON was next introduced, and greeted with enthusiasm. He made a short speech in which he submitted a few plain propositions which involved the substance of the controversy between us and the rebels.

SPEECH OF GEN. HARRINGTON.

Adjt.-Gen. SAMUEL M. HARRINGTON, of the State of Delaware, was the next speaker introduced to the meeting, and in coming forward was warmly applauded. He said: I have come from the little State of Delaware to be present this day at the grand uprising of this great Northern Capital of the Union of the United States, and I am here to lend a helping hand in the support of the Government for the suppression of this gigantic rebellion. [Applause.] I am here also to state that I am one of those who will go the whole length in endeavoring to punish traitors and treason. [Applause, and "That's right."] With the help of Almighty God and Federal bayonets, the Government shall be triumphant and will conquer, and the glorious Union of the country we shall all live, I trust, to see restored. I look at France, Austria, proud England, and lovely Ireland, with its beautiful shamrock, but I love the American flag, because under it I was born, and I hope to die under it. [Renewed cheers.] I hope I shall never die under a Copperhead flag, and I am satisfied I shall not. [Hear and "That's good."]

The General retired amid loud cheers.

A song was then sung by the Glee Club; after which the Chairman read the patriotic letter from the Governor of Delaware, the audience receiving it with hearty manifestations of approval. W. H. GALE, Esq., was introduced, and spoke at considerable length, urging devotion to country in this time of trial, and pouring out bitter words against those who openly or secretly menace her security. He closed with the reading of a resolution, that while our soldiers are fighting against armed traitors in the field, they should be allowed the privilege of voting against unarmed ones at home. The resolution received a tumultuous assent, and after listening to short addresses from Mr. PATRICK O'SHEA, of this City, and Mr. TIMOTHY PARSONS, of Missouri, adjourned to augment the throng about stand No. 1.

Stand No. 3.

Of which Dr. FRANCIS LIEBER was President, was erected in front of the Worth Monument, at the junction of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-fifth-street. It was tastefully dressed with flags, and bore as a motto the ever-memorable words of ANDREW JACKSON: "The Union, it must and shall be preserved." The meeting at this stand was organized about 4½ o'clock by the choice of Chairman and Vice-Presidents. The patriotic resolutions of the day were then read by Hon. HIRAM BARNEY, and adopted by acclamation. The Chairman then introduced Hon. Mr. LYMAN TREMAIN, who, on coming forward, was received with great applause.

SPEECH OF HON. LYMAN TREMAIN.

LOYAL FELLOW-CITIZENS: This immense assemblage, presided over by the war-worn veteran who sits in yonder balcony, [cheers for Gen. SCOTT,] presents an imposing aspect of moral grandeur and sublimity. We are not fanatics nor insensible to the evils of the civil war now raging in our land. We earnestly long for an honorable peace. We sympathize deeply with the thousands of families now mourning over the victims of this accursed rebellion. We weep for the brave and patriotic martyrs who have offered up their lives in the cause of their country. But while thus keenly alive to the sacrifices we have made, and must continue to make, we also realize the priceless value of the Union and our free institutions; and we know that these and the blessings of permanent peace can only be preserved at the cannon's mouth, and by wading through seas of blood. We meet again to-day, therefore, with the sober earnestness of men who know what they are about, to imitate the example of our Revolutionary Fathers, by pledging to the cause of our country, our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor. [Applause.]

In conclusion he said: Let the grand army of Union men press right onward, working while the day lasts, performing their duty to the best of their ability, rallying as a band of brothers around the flag of their country, clinging closer to the Union the more it is endangered, maintaining through sunshine and storm an unshaken faith that a final victory will be ours! [Great applause.]

Mr. TREMAIN was followed by Hon. A. H. BAILEY, by Mr. REINHOLD SOLYER, of Washington, and by Mr. PHILIP FRANKENHEIMER.

Short addresses were also delivered by Mr. LAMBERT, and Mr. DAVID ALTON of Pennsylvania, after which, at the hour of 6½ o'clock, the assembly gave three rousing cheers for the Union, and dispersed.

Stand No. 4.

This stand was generally set apart for ladies, and hundreds of the fair sex had assembled on the platform. The stand was decorated with the American colors, and banners inscribed with appropriate mottoes were suspended from the upper rails. A band of music was in attendance, and played at intervals delightful airs. The meeting was called to order by Mr. CHARLES GOULD, and by his nomination Mayor OPDYKE was declared Chairman, and upon accepting the office said:

SPEECH OF MAYOR OPDYKE.

In this crisis, he said, it was the duty of the North to stand by the Government. Within the past two years this State has sent forward to the army 200,000 volunteers, and expended for the cause of the Union $1,000,000. He did not mention that in a spirit of emulation, for the whole North had been equally patriotic; but simply to show that the original declaration had been sustained, and as an earnest of what might be expected of the State in the future. [Applause.] Let us be stimulated to press onward until our arms achieve the decided victory. [Applause.]

Mr. GOULD then read a series of resolutions similar to those read at Stand No. 1, after which Rev. Dr. HITCHCOCK was introduced.

SPEECH OF DR. HITCHCOCK.

Firstly, this accursed rebellion must be put down; secondly, this accursed rebellion can be put down; and thirdly, this accursed rebellion will be put down. If Gen. JACKSON was there, they knew very well how he would put it, "By the Eternal, it shall be crushed." [Applause.] The women of the North would pardon him for saying that they were not so earnest in our cause as are the women of the South in the cause of the rebellion. He had been told the difference between the women of the North and South was that the wives of the North wish to have their husbands and sons remain at home, while the women of the South kicked their husbands and sons from their door-steps. Let us have no hand but a mailed hand for traitors; no smile for them but the smile of scorn. [Applause.]

The following letter from Hon. JAS. T. BRADY was next read by Mr. GOULD:

LETTER OF HON. JAMES T. BRADY.

No. 121 WEST TWENTY-THIRD-STREET, April 20, 1863.

Prosper M. Wetmore, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: I am very much obliged to the Committee of Arrangements for tendering me a position on the stand where the ladies are to present themselves. And I regret exceedingly that I will not be able to accept the honor thus offered. I have just recovered from a fever and have a severe cough which makes it impossible for me to speak in public. Even conversation in the quiet of a parlor is irritating to my throat and chest.

I am very desirous to have the cause of my absence clearly stated, and beg you to do this for me, at the same time reading to our friends the following portion of this letter:

[illegible] number of my democratic brethren persistently allege that this Union League is a mere partisan scheme of Republican leaders. It is difficult to deal with such men. They would know that what they say is utterly unfounded, if they would take the trouble to inform themselves of the origin, constitution and "platform" of the League. It is exclusively a national organization, and for national objects alone, wholly exclusive of party preferences or obligations. The great purpose is to insure at the North, entire unanimity of sentiment and action in support of the war for the preservation of the Constitution and the Union.

[illegible]—To effect an object so holy it is not only honorable but necessary for citizens of every race and creed, religious and political, to unite in close and continuous fraternity.

[illegible]—We will never consent that more than one nation shall exist on the territory of the United States.

[illegible]—at the eight millions at the South, who from [illegible] conduct, to dishonor will attach to them, whatever may be thought of the cause they fight for, no one will deny that they have exhibited heroic devotion, patient endurance, great skill, remarkable [illegible], splendid courage and masterly generalship. But [illegible] twenty millions, with the immense resources at command, [illegible] acknowledge their inability to defeat them, this shameful avowal will make us [illegible] contemptible in the estimation of all brave men now and forever.

[illegible]—The Northern men who denounce repeated assurances from the South that it will never again associate with us, still, with unexampled folly, suggest compromises, and incoherently rave about peace, without the ability to define any other mode of effecting it than by physical triumph. These men are despised by the Southerners, who only respect, because they are brave, the opponents who honorably and gallantly contend with them for the honors of the field. Each of the Southern leaders will hereafter exclaim with Cor. Decius in the play, "It is astonishing how much I like a man after I've fought with him."

Fourth—It is rather amusing to have one's Democracy questioned because he insists upon supporting the Administration in prosecuting a war.

This is the first time the Democracy ever tolerated opposition to any war, in the Revolution, the war of 1812, or that of Mexico.

When nullification was attempted by South Carolina, the whole Democracy cheered Gen. JACKSON, who would have put it down by arms, if South Carolina had not yielded.

"Our Country, right or wrong."

"The Union must and shall be preserved."

These have been the familiar Democratic war cries.

Why should they be disused because the enemies who stab at our national life are those who should shed the last drop of their blood to preserve it?

I wish these discursive suggestions presented in my behalf just at this time. And in conclusion, have only to say that, notwithstanding the Lord Burleigh head-shakes of some, the Mawworm sighings of others, the mysterious whispers of City Hall mourners, and the keen vision of the place-loving patriots, who see nothing but evil in whatever does not bear the word "Party" stamped upon it, I mean to coöperate with the Loyal League in any and every effort now and hereafter, in this City and elsewhere, to convince the South and the world that the war for our national existence shall never cease until we obtain absolute and final conquest over physical resistance, or until our people have prepared themselves for the degrading announcement that two Northern men are not equal to one Southerner in the courage and perseverance essential to maintain one's principles, support his Government or preserve his country. Yours, very truly, (Signed,) JAS. T. BRADY.

The next speaker introduced was GEO. W. CURTIS, who said:

SPEECH OF GEORGE W. CURTIS, ESQ.

The war, he said, did not begin with the first shot fired at Sumter, it had already been commenced by those who had fired upon an unarmed ship of the United States bearing food to a starving United States garrison; and now—another proof that although the mills of God grind slowly they grind exceeding sure and fine—the men who had inaugurated their rebellious career by firing upon a provision ship were themselves in want of food. Mr. CURTIS spoke at length upon the duties and responsibilities of the hour.

The "Hutchinsons," were introduced and sang a patriotic song, entitled "Rally Round the Flag," and also "Glory, Hallelujah." Mr. E. N. DICKERSON was the next speaker. He introduced the "Drummer-boy of the Rappahannock." Mr. D. then spoke on the importance of our free institutions and glorious system of self-government in developing our national genius and enterprise. In conclusion he urged the necessity for silencing the traitorous advocates of peace—the Copperheads of the North—and upholding the Administration in all measures for the suppression of the rebellion.

E. DELAFIELD SMITH, United States District Attorney, was introduced to the audience by Mr. DODGE, as the only man in this country who had ever had the courage to attempt, and the ability to succeed in carrying out the law existant against the Slave-trade. Mr. SMITH spoke very briefly, appealing to the patriotic sentiments of the women of the North, and denouncing the secret enemies to our Union, saying—"He who loves Slavery better than his country can be no patriot."

Mr. D. S. CODDINGTON next addressed the audience. He said the first trigger pulled on this nation asked America the iron question, "Will you go forward with LINCOLN or backward with BEAUREGARD?" We insisted upon the old Union simply because the principles upon which the South destroys it makes any other Union impossible. Mr. CODDINGTON made a very eloquent speech.

The concluding speaker was C. S. SPENCER.

Brig.-Gen. A. W. TAYLOR offered his "New-York Brigade" as a desirable organization for any to enter, who chose to manifest their patriotism rather by deeds than words. He said he had served with Gen. SCOTT in Mexico, in every battle from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico, and in this war took out to the field the First Scott Life Guards, he therefore knew something of soldiering, and could conscientiously offer his recruits good rations, plenty of drill, and, when they got into the field, plenty of fighting. [Great applause.]

The meeting at this stand then adjourned, the assemblage dispersing amid enthusiastic cheers for the Union.

The Balcony of the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

GEN. SCOTT PRESIDING.

Owing to the feeble health of Gen. SCOTT, who kindly consented to preside over the meeting, or, as he expressed it, "to help the boys take one more battery," it was arranged that he should occupy a chair on the balcony of the Fifth-avenue Hotel, directly opposite Stand No. 1. The balcony was appropriately decked for the occasion with the American colors, and from the balustrade was suspended a large banner, with the following inscription:

"The fire of the flint."
OUR COUNTRY.
Its unity and integrity will be maintained against all foes, domestic or foreign.

A precisely 4 o'clock, Gen. Scott left his parlor in the hotel, and accompanied by His Honor Mayor Opdyke, David Dudley Field, Esq., James Wadsworth, Gen. P. M. Wetmore, and Dr. Campbell, of the army, (physician to the General,) proceeded to the balcony. No sooner had he stepped from the window upon the balcony than he was recognized by the immense throng congregated in front of the hotel, every man of whom appeared to vie with the other in his efforts to give the hero of a hundred battles a greeting worthy of his fame, his character, and his life-long service. The cheering and waving of hats from the crowd in the streets continued for several minutes, while from the windows of the hotel, each one of which was set with a cluster of feminine beauties, waved innumerable strips of cambric. The General was evidently much affected by the warmth and cordiality of the greeting extended to him, and returned the salutations of the people with repeated soldierly bows. Being too weak to address so vast an assemblage, he spoke a few words to Mr. JAMES WADSWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, who stood by his side, and after the cheering had subsided, Mr. WADSWORTH spoke as follows:

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK: I am desired by Gen. SCOTT to express to you his thanks for your presence on this occasion. Wherever an enemy of his country is to be found there he is ever present, and he is here to-day to "help take one battery more." [Applause.] As long as his life shall be spared he will always be found ready to serve the cause of his country; and it is the earnest wish of every American heart that the inspiration of his noble presence, his wise counsel, and his patriotic example, may be preserved to his countrymen until the Union and the Constitution shall be restored throughout the length and breadth of the land. [Prolonged applause.]

The General then seated himself in a chair at the front of the balcony, and the Mayor and the other gentlemen who accompanied him thither, with the exception of Dr. CAMPBELL, left for the speakers' stands. The ladies of the hotel were then admitted to the balcony, and in a few minutes it was filled with silks and crinoline. Among the ladies who sat near the General, were the wife of Gen. VIELE and the wife of Col. JOHN C. MONTGOMERY. A large number of gentlemen also found access to the balcony during the meeting, among whom were Rev. Dr. VINTON, Judge DAVIES, Judge SLOSSON, Judge HUTCHINS, Col. MONTGOMERY and others.

The chilly air perceptibly affected the General and he desired a gentleman near him to bring him a shawl. None being at hand a large-sized American flag was handed out from the window, and some quick-witted friend wrapped it closely round and about the shoulders and limbs of the veteran who had so often upheld it on the battle-field, while the crowd below, struck with the happy occurrence, showed their approval of the chosen standard in oft repeated cheers.

The General conversed freely with those around him, and expressed himself much pleased with the patriotic demonstration. During the speech of Mr. RAYMOND, the speaker having made an allusion to the presence of the General, the vast audience turned round, and gave the old hero three rousing cheers, which the General acknowledged with a bow. At the close of Mr. RAYMOND's speech, having occupied the chair just an hour, he informed his physician that he should be compelled to retire to the hotel. His departure was the signal for another outburst of enthusiasm, and the cheers of 20,000 voices followed his retiring form as it passed from the balcony to the parlor of the hotel. The expressmen, whose procession passed the hotel soon after, were much disappointed in not seeing the General, and it was his wish not to leave until they arrived, but his physician did not consider it prudent for him to remain any longer.

Welcome to the Delegates from Other States.

When the mass meetings around the square had been adjourned, the delegates to the Union meeting, by invitation of the League, were entertained and welcomed at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. The Chair was occupied by CHARLES GOULD, Esq., and Hon. DANIEL S. DICKINSON made the welcoming address. Responses were made by Gen. HARRINGTON, for Delaware; Mayor CHAPMAN, of Baltimore, for Maryland; and Mr. USHER, for Pennsylvania. Among the prominent men of this City present were Mayor OPDYKE, Judges BONNEY and WHITE, WALDO HUTCHINS, ETHAN ALLEN, JONATHAN STURGES, and many others. The entertainment, which was excellent, detained the company until a late hour in the evening.

LIQUOR IN CUSTOM-HOUSE.
HOTEL KEEPERS,
BAR-ROOMS,
AND GROCERS.

In consequence of my giving up one of my bonded stores on the first of May next, I will sell the stock of Schiedam Schnapps, duty paid, in that store, at a less price than good Gin is sold for by the gallon in pipes, under the Custom-house lock.

Hotel Keepers, Bar-rooms and Grocers, who retail liquor by the glass, will find the Schnapps cheaper than any other imported liquor in this country.

Persons who purchase fifty cases, can have it remain in bond by removing it to other bonded stores.

"YE CANNOT LOVE GOD AND MAMMON," AND YET YOU OUGHT TO.—The logical conclusions of all the attempts recently made by H. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU,

For weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretions or Abuse, attended with the following symptoms: Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Dimness of Vision, Wakefulness, Pain in the Back, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face, Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases," INSANITY and CONSUMPTION. Many are aware of the causes of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums, and the Melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to Strengthen and invigorate the System, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does.
